TWO BOATMEN FOUND BOUND IN HARBOUR
Police Suspect Murder
in Mysterious Case.
NO SIGN OF ROBBERY.

Mysterious circumstances surround the death of two junk men, who were found floating in the harbour and tied together by cord round their hands, at 8 a.m. yesterday morning. The Police who have been searching for the bodies since Thursday, suspect that the two were murdered.

The first intimation of tragedy came to the Police, when six men, wet and bedraggled through immersion in the harbour, made a report at Yau-mat Police Station.

They stated that they were loads of two junks, which had lain at Cheung Sha Wan preparatory to sailing to Chinese territory. The two boats were side by side and fully loaded. On the larger of the two vessels, five men were sleeping. Three others were sleeping on the smaller boat.

In the early hours of the morning they were awakened by five or six men who boarded the junk from a motor boat and claimed to be Custom Officers. After inspecting the cargo, the alleged officers bound the men together in pairs with cord round their wrists, and commenced to tow the two junks in the direction of Yau-mat. During the journey, six of the captives managed to release their hands, and dropped overboard and swam ashore.

After the report had been made, a search was made for the junks, and one was found off Yau-mat and the other off Green Island. There was no one on either of the two boats. The two remaining boatmen were missing.

A Police launch searching the waters near Green Island for trace of the two men found the bodies floating in the harbour tied exactly as they had been tied by their captors. The names of the two dead men, who are masters of the junks, are Ah Yiu and Wong Chi-yung.

Junction By Night.
FREIGHT TRAIN ESCAPES.
Tokyo, Yesterday.

Three railway employees, including a deputy station-master, were shot to death and three were burned to death when a party of 60 mounted Chinese bandits carried out a daring surprise attack on the important junction of Sauping-kai, on the South Manchuria Railway mainline, shortly after midnight yesterday.

A goods train which was about to leave the station for Dairen narrowly escaped by putting on full speed but the station was set afire and destroyed completely.

The raiders, the dead left behind among the burning buildings, spurred away and vanished as suddenly as they had come. — Reuter.

New York, Yesterday.

Tony Canzoneri, hardhitting young Italian lightweight, successfully defended his world title against the assault directed against it by Billy Petrolle.

Petrolle, known for his gameness, could not damage the wily champion sufficiently in 15 rounds of fighting to gain the points necessary.

"THE DREAM OF AH LUM"
BY THOMAS BURKE.

"The Dream of Ah Lum" a great short story by the popular novelist Thomas Burke will appear in tomorrow's China Mail, continuing the series of short stories which are published daily in Hong Kong's oldest and brightest newspaper.

On Tuesday, National elections take place both in Germany and United States of America. During this week special articles by well-known writers dealing with leading figures and events in those countries will appear each day in the China Mail.

Descriptive articles with the lives of both candidates, President Hoover and Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt, are included among these features.

Other features in the China Mail, the oldest-established newspaper in the Far East, include the Colony's best Sports pages, a Women's page, a cross-word puzzle and a daily cartoon. Columns on Literature, Art and Drama, Building, Engineering and Aviation, Motoring, Cinema and Children's Topics, also appear during each week.

CABINET CRISIS RINGS ALARM IN CENTRAL EUROPE
Queen Marie Believed
Fleeing From Trouble.

KING REFUSES TO ACT.
(Reuter's Special Service).

London, Yesterday.

All Central Europe is humming with the rumours of impending sensational developments in Yugo-Slavian politics, where the situation has been growing steadily worse in the past years, and which culminated in a Cabinet crisis yesterday.

Coincidentally, Queen Marie suddenly and mysteriously departed on a foreign journey.

Extraordinary police precautions were taken at Prague; in order to prevent public access to the station while Queen Marie detained and hurried to a waiting motorcar. She departed for an unknown destination.

The inference is drawn in Budapest that the Royal Family is fleeing the country, though the Yugo-Slav Legation there declares the journey is not connected with the political situation.

Belgrade reports state the Cabinet crisis is due to personal rivalries still not settled to-day following to King's strong superstition about Friday.

DEMOCRATS' CHARGES CALLED 'FALSEHOOD'

U.S. PRESIDENTIAL WAR IN FINAL PHASES
COOLIDGE AIDS PRESIDENT

AS THE CAMPAIGN FOR THE PRESIDENTIAL HONOURS IN THE UNITED STATES COMES TOWARDS ITS CLOSE, AND THE STRENGTH OF THE CANDIDATES NEARS THE FINAL TEST AT THE POOLS ON TUESDAY, PRESIDENT HERBERT HOOVER HAS RALLIED THE REPUBLICAN PARTY IN HIS VAN AND IS MAKING A LAST DRAMATIC APPEAL FOR SUPPORT.

Beside the President in these last few days of the campaign, former President Calvin Coolidge will stand, and upon his recommendation the Republican party counts for some measure of success.

Mr. Hoover is concentrating upon the middle-west, the great agricultural centre of the nation, where the disaffected farmers have apparently swung into a solid phalanx behind Governor Roosevelt, the Democratic party's nominee.

Mr. Hoover goes west on his closing speaking tour with the word from Wall Street that the unsatisfactory and discouraging odds, until recently scarcely more than even, have suddenly jumped to four to one against him. But he challenges the charges made against his administration and labels them "falsehood."

Springfield, Ill., Yesterday.

President Hoover, moving westward with the tide of the election battle, spoke here to-day and in these closing stages of his election fight his campaign is marked by the most strenuous efforts, particularly in his anxious to recall the farmers of these agricultural states to the Republican fold.

In his address to-day the President stressed the fact that two-thirds of the goods under the Hawley-Smith tariff were agricultural products, and reiterated his intention of exchanging war debts for increased trade with the nations of the world.

His object would be, he said, to exchange American agricultural products with the debtor nations, which would assist the credit of the foreign powers, encourage their purchasing of American goods, stimulate American business and revive the buying power abroad.

He emphasised, too, the fact that the tide of depression had already turned and that unemployment in America had decreased by a million since the summer.

St. Louis, Yesterday.

In a 10,000-word broadside, President Herbert Hoover accused the Democrats of conducting a campaign of avoidances based on false promises, employing the deliberate misrepresentation and colossal falsehood that the Republicans were responsible for the world economic catastrophe.

"They express no gratitude that in my manufacture of this world crisis I let the United States off easier than Russia, Western Europe and South America," the President said drily.

ROOSEVELT'S STOCK SOARS
TO NEW ODDS
Wall Street Makes Him Favourite.
FOUR-TO-ONE OFFERED:
(Reuter's Special Service).

New York, Yesterday.

Wall Street is quoting odds of 4/1 on Governor Roosevelt. One brokerage house has handled $31,400,000 on that basis.

During the past several weeks odds have been gradually changing.

At the beginning of the campaign, the betting was generally even, with the present President, Mr. Hoover, probably a slight favourite.

With the development of the campaign, the obvious desire of various formerly strong "Hoover States" for a change of government, the indication seen in the Literary Digest straw vote of an overwhelming victory for Mr. Roosevelt, the odds changed.

Latterly, Wall Street has seen the betting jump from even money on the Roosevelt bet, to seven to 10, two to one, three to one and now four to one.

If the present trend of events continues, the nation will probably go to the polls with Governor Roosevelt a five or six to one favourite.

There are few "tokens" of four to one money.

LARWOOD "FIREWORKS".

Adelaide, Yesterday.

The M.C.C. touring team to-day carried their overnight total of 341 for 5 to 634 for 9 at which point D. R. Jardine applied the closure. South Australia at the close of play had scored 145 for 2.

The wicket was good and the weather fine, and the luncheon interval was taken with the score at 444 for 6. A crowd of 5,000 witnessed play before lunch.

The crowd had increased to 20,000 when play was resumed after lunch.

D. R. Jardine, captain of the English cricketers, batted brightly for 108 not out, scored in 213 minutes, and found the boundary on ten occasions.

R. E. S. Wyatt, the Vice captain of the tourists, scored 61 in 108 minutes, and hit seven boundaries.

Harold Larwood, the English fast bowler, gave an exhilarating exhibition of hard hitting to score 81 in 42 minutes. He hit two sixes and 10 boundaries in his brief knock.

Clarence Grimmett was the most successful South Australian bowler, capturing 4 wickets for 170 runs, while M. G. Waite took 2 for 108.

South Australia also batted brightly, the century going up in 65 minutes. K. Nitschke rattled up 69 in 85 minutes, including three sixes and six boundaries. At the close of play the home side had scored 145 for 2. Victor Richardson, the South Australian captain, being undefeated with 72 to his credit. — Reuter.

(Reuter's Special Service)

London, Yesterday.

Mr. Stanley Baldwin will replace Premier MacDonald as the principal guest at the Guild Hall Banquet on Wednesday.

The Prime Minister has been strongly advised by his doctor to rest his eyes as much as possible.

The atmosphere of functions of the sort planned for Wednesday is trying for tired eyes, he is informed.

Mr. Baldwin, it is expected, may make some rather sensational announcement respecting the government's plan to relieve unemployment, at the Lord Mayor's banquet. — Reuter.

LEGAL BEER SALE

Washington, Yesterday.

Legal beer by next March is predicted by the Chairman of the Committee of the Labour Federation which has been investigating the possible effects of the modification of the Volstead Act.

He claimed a number of members of the present Congress had changed their attitude since the strength of the "wet rising" had become apparent and said the modification of the Prohibition Law was an early probability. — Reuter's American Service.

Woosung's Defender
Hailed As Hero.
WILL VISIT EUROPE.

General Oong Chiao-Yuan, former garrison commander at Woosung, who defended those fortified areas for many days against the attacks of Japanese forces, was hailed as a hero when he visited Hong Kong.

General Oong is on his way to Manila, the Straits Settlements, America and Europe, on six months' leave of absence, where he will convey the thanks of the 19th Route Army to the overseas Chinese who so loyally supported China's troops in the field against Japan.

General Oong is a great believer in the efficacy of an air force in waging modern war. He would prefer, he says, that China should concentrate upon building a fighting fleet of aeroplanes, rather than spending money on warships.

Accompanied by Messrs. Lo Yau-po, secretary of the China Aviation Company, Colonel Lam Kwan-nang, commander of the Second Squadron of the Canton Air Force, and Admiral Chan Ting, chief of staff of the Canton Navy, he was feted here yesterday.

Studied in Japan.

The Committee of Preparation for the Technical School for soldiers of the 19th Route Army gave him a reception at West Point. Mr. Yung Kwai-ching presided. It was here that General Oong told of his hopes for the development of a Chinese air force. He had learned the FLYING POLICE PATROLS.

Berlin, Yesterday.

Apart from a limited tram service under police protection, the city is without means of transport this morning.

Communists and other extremists during the night filled up the tramlines with cement and threw barricades up in many places in the suburbs.

Flying squads of armed police are dashing round the city, prepared for trouble, but up to now there has been no disorder.

Attempts of the extremists to persuade other workers to join a general strike have so far proved unsuccessful.

Two more Communist papers have been suppressed but the strike threat excitement is really overshadowed by the election. In Berlin a largely decreased poll is likely if the stoppage continues in the transport service. — Reuter.

VALUABLE GOLD
"LEAD" BARED IN NEW ZEALAND

New Strike Near Old
Mine Working.
FOURTH IN FEW WEEKS.

(Reuter's Special Service).

Wellington, Yesterday.

Following the discovery of a gold "lead" on the banks of the Kawarau River by two miners recently, two other prospectors have reported they have struck "lead" in an old river bed near Beaumont, Otago, in the famous Gullies, the scene of the great gold rush of 1861.

A rush to stake claims is proceeding.

Miners from all parts of the country are making all haste to the spot where "discovery claims" are located and the area for miles about will be staked out in a matter of days.

The present "rush" recalls such thrilling times as were experienced here in 1816, in the Kaitake in 1899, and in California before and after. But more modern methods have replaced those that made the "musher" and "sour-dough" famous. Wealthy interests now use aeroplanes to rush expert mining men to the scene of new "strikes," to prospect the area and "locate" on likely claims.

This is the major gold discovery of the past six weeks. One near Dunedin, N. Z., another in South Africa, a third in Labrador, and this, the fourth, have created sensations in their adjacent countries and have awakened lively interest abroad.

GRAVE STRUGGLE AHEAD.

Shanghai, Yesterday.

In an attempt to wrest Tsitsihar from the Japanese, General Ma Chan-shan's forces, together with Volunteers, are converging on the city, which promises to be the theatre of a large-scale struggle before long, according to Chinese reports.

Ma Chan-shan's vanguards, it is reported, have reached Yang Chia Tun in the vicinity of Tsitsihar. Their advance has been facilitated by the defection of a Brigade of Manchukuo troops, who deserted their Japanese allies at the crucial moment.

Meanwhile General Su Ping-wen is turning a deaf ear to all overtures to return to the Manchukuo fold and has yet again telegraphed to Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang expressing his determination not to come to terms with the Japanese. — Reuter.

Moscow, Yesterday.

The death sentence upon the station-master Bukalov, held responsible for giving the signal which caused a collision of the Black Sea Express with a shunting engine, was carried out to-day.

More than 90 persons died in the mishap near Moscow on October 16, and 300 were injured.

Other railway employees were given prison terms of various lengths. — Reuter.

BRIDGE NOTES

SUIT BIDS.

CHOOSING a suit as an Opening bid furnishes the bidder with many added safeguards if it should turn out that his partner is trickless. At a suit declaration the Declarer can usually so play his cards as to make tricks with some of his small trumps. Played at no-trump, if the Dummy is worthless, the adversaries can generally establish their long suits under the protection of their honour-tricks and inflict tremendous penalties. While the factor of safety is only one of the reasons for preferring an Opening suit bid to an Opening and non-illuminating bid of no-trump, it is an important factor and one no Contract player should overlook. If, however, your partner should be the player who had considerable strength and one of the opponents held a bust hand, an Opening suit bid may give you the opportunity to collect substantial penalties when a strong hand is held over you and its holder decides to double for a Takeout.

Observe to-day's hand.

Dbl.	1D (1)	Pass	1NT (2)

1.—West cannot pass his partner's Takeout Double. With an absolutely trickless hand his only bid is one diamond as he has neither four spades nor four hearts.

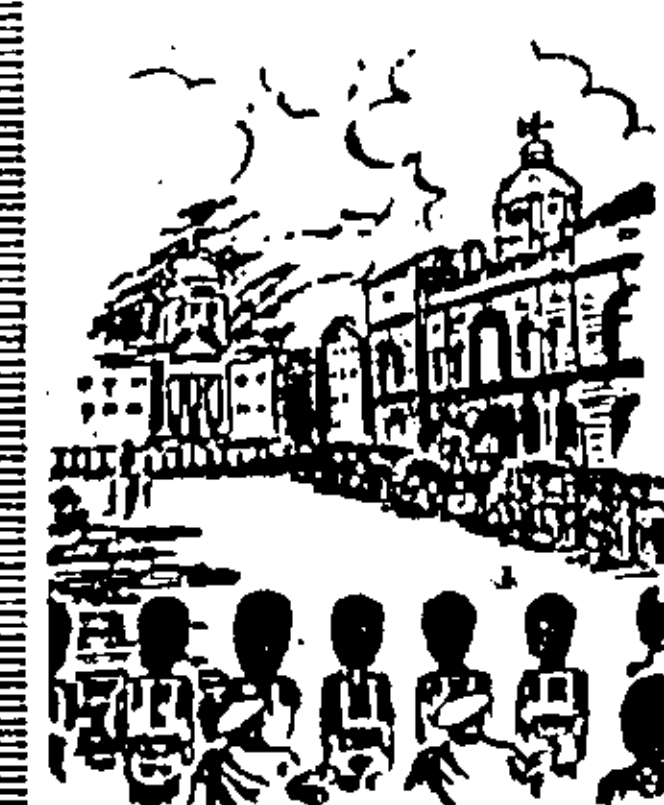

2.—East understands his partner's message, but one no-trump appears safer than one diamond.

Against the contract of one no-trump, South opened the Knave of spades and East immediately realized the hopelessness of his task. He won the spade trick with the Ace and led the King of clubs, South discarding the five of diamonds. North won with the Ace and returned a spade, having played the Queen on the first round to unblock the suit. East permitted South to win this trick and a third round of spades established it. East now led the Queen of clubs and followed with the Ace of diamonds, as he realized that his chance of taking any more than 4 tricks was remote indeed.

Thus, at a contract of one no-trump, East was penalized 1,000 points. The penalty, if played at one diamond doubled, would have been equally severe. The seas of distribution are indeed stormy and filled with hidden reefs and the Contract mariner should be sure that his compass is true when he is engaged in navigating them.

LONDON TOPICS

From Our Own Correspondent

October 16.

Sir Samuel Hoare.

Sir Samuel Hoare, who is at Balmoral as Minister in attendance on the King, is as modest as he is gifted. He professed to be surprised when Mr. Ramsay MacDonald asked him to take the India Office last year.

But the Prime Minister's and Mr. Baldwin's choice has been more than justified by the success of his administration in that difficult department.

"Thorough" might be Sir Samuel Hoare's motto. At Oxford he won the highest distinction, both in the schools and in athletics. When a few years ago he took to skating, he soon became an expert, and the silver medal he has won by his prowess on the rink is one of the most cherished possessions.

Lady Maud Hoare has closely identified herself with her husband's career. No one is more popular among his Chelsea constituents than this daughter of the late Lord Beauchamp.

New Foreign Secretary?

Political speculation which has been centring on the position of Sir Herbert Samuel has suddenly shifted to bring Sir John Simon into the limelight. Gossip both at Geneva and in London has been busy removing him from the Foreign Office.

To any observer of the European situation it must appear clear that the present moment with foreign affairs in such a delicate state is definitely the most unsuitable for such a change.

As a new Foreign Secretary the choice is offered of Lord Londonderry, Lord Irwin, and Lord Reading, which is a better selection of possibilities than is sometimes made by the prophets in clubs.

But for the Prime Minister to relinquish the services of Sir John Simon just now would undoubtedly have reactions upon European opinion which would complicate an already difficult situation.

Gandhi-Irwin Pact in Art.

A piece of sculpture has been erected in front of the stadium in Coronation Park, Coimbatore, India, to commemorate the pact which was signed by Lord Irwin and Mr. Gandhi in 1931.

In front are the figures of Mr. Gandhi and the Viceroy signing the pact, and behind is the figure of Bharata Mata (Mother India).

Its sculptor is Mr. Kanappa, of Madras. The statues have a canopy of reinforced concrete, which was made by and presented to the park by the Railway and General Engineering Company of Coimbatore.

"Sandringham Time."

In view of the mild controversy aroused as to the reason why the clocks at Sandringham are kept half an hour fast, the following explanation may be of interest.

A visitor honoured by an invitation to Sandringham, was warned of the change of time, first by an enquiry in the train going down, then by a footman on arrival at the house, and finally by the King himself.

His Majesty's own explanation was, "My father used to have big shooting parties here, and couldn't get his guests up in the morning, so he put the clocks on half an hour!"

The rule applies to the whole village and the clocks are not changed to summer time. An event was given out in church as taking place "Three o'clock, Sandringham time."

A New Field-Marshal?

There has been some speculation recently as to who is likely to "succeed" the late Viscount Plumer as a Field-Marshal. This is rendered rather idle by the fact that, strictly speaking, there is no vacancy in this rank.

Unlike Admirals of the Fleet, there is no fixed establishment for Field-Marshal, who are, theoretically at least, appointed solely at the pleasure of the Sovereign, so that the number has varied very considerably from time to time.

Towards the end of her reign, Queen Victoria made it a custom to create a new Field-Marshal upon the occasion of her birthday every year. Thus both Viscount Wolsey and Earl Roberts were appointed in successive years.

Sir John Lavery's Coins.

Sir John and Lady Lavery, by the way, have only recently come over from Ireland, where they have been staying with the Governor-General and Mrs. McNeill. Mrs. McNeill and Lady Lavery are close friends.

It is well known that the Irish collection on the notes in the new Irish currency is a portrait of Lady Lavery, for it was Sir John who designed the new notes and coins. He could hardly have found a more suitable "model."

Strange Animals.

The coins bear the image of all sorts of animals connected with the Free State, and very attractive they are. But a boorish English visitor of the sort that should not be let out of the country, did not concur.

He was shopping at a little out-of-the-way village, and criticizing everything Irish. Finally he said scornfully: "Look! Even your florins have the picture of a pig on them."

The kindly old store-keeper had had about enough. She adjusted her spectacles and said: "Ah! And begob now! And isn't that foine! And I was always ather thinkin' 'twas the blessed Quane Victoria herself."

Queer Quilt Rents.

The payment by the Duke of Marlborough of a small silk flag as rent for Blenheim Palace reminds a correspondent of other "quilt rents" which still exist, and are paid regularly to the Crown.

The Duke of Atholl probably has the easiest rent to pay. His soil is one white rose, and this is not even paid annually, but only when the Sovereign is actually visiting Blair Atholl.

Most of the "quilt rents" are confined to Scotland, and two are particularly interesting. Sir George Clarke, the Scottish landowner, blows three blasts on a bugle when the King is hunting stag in his neighbourhood. A certain way of spoiling the day.

The Captain of Dunstaffnage maintains his title by sleeping for one night in the year inside the walls of a ruined and roofless castle.

"GLOBE OF DEATH" THRILLS.

Carnival Entertainment
For Kowloon.

A newcomer in the local entertainment world, is Tate's Manila Carnival Show, which makes its first appearance in Kowloon on November 10 on the vacant ground in front of the Peninsula Hotel.

The Carnival provides something new in entertainment in the form of the "Globe of Death," a larkie work globe, round the inside of which, a rider performs amazing evolutions.

Another of the very popular attractions will be the "Dodgem" cars which are self operated and provide great amusement. Other side shows are the Big Wheel, the Merry-Go-Round-a treat for the kiddies, the Hawaiian Hula Dancers who never fail to draw a crowd; a Flea circus which does everything but bite and the Motor Drome which consists of a series of hair raising motor cycle stunts.

The Carnival will be here on a very short stay as they are to fulfill engagements down South.

Needlework Pleasure

There are active spirits who like a little needlework for the holidays and who take pleasure in finishing off something of a decorative nature. Decoration can be fused with utilitarianism in an attractive way by engaging upon a fairly large piece of petit point or plain needlework, as the case may be.

The piece must be large enough to form the surface of a little table. The table is made to tip up, so that it can form a fire-screen. With a suitable plain walnut frame and stand it serves both in winter and summer to subdue the heat of the fire or to make an empty grate more cheerful. When it is set flat it makes a good little table for after-dinner coffee, care being taken that the coffee and all that pertains to it stand on a tray, so that the work of the table is not soiled.

If the design is large enough the table can also be used for cards. Sometimes designs are made up as the worker goes along, and this is amusing from the point of view of colour. Sometimes a pattern is made which is repeated to make a regular design. The most entertaining form of colouring is generally obtained from something with a central idea, much conventionalised. Cross-stitch can also be used in the same interest. It is sometimes put under glass, but for all its merits glass is never really pleasant to the touch.

White Wedding In Japan's Capital

Princess Opens New Sailors' Rest

Women Of London

A BRIDE who completed her first novel in between making plans for her wedding was Miss Alice Lindley, who had a picturesque all-white wedding on October 22 in Tokyo. Her father, Sir Francis Lindley, is the British Ambassador to Japan.

The novel, "Mundy's Child," to be published this autumn, is a witty and entertaining story of a diplomat's daughter spending a three months' holiday in England, the background being that of the novelist's own girlhood.

The white satin bridal gown and white organdie bridesmaids' frocks, made of specially good materials to withstand the Tropics, was made in the picturesque little dress salon in a West-end mews run by her sister, Miss Sally Lindley.

The wedding dress was high-waisted, with an orange blossom spray on the corsage and a long train cut in one with the gown. The cap was gathered closely round the head, with a broad band of orange blossom, from which the long net veil fell.

Marguerite Wreaths. The task of taking out the wedding dress fell to the bride's aunt, the Hon. Mrs. Stirling. Her daughter Peggy was a bridesmaid with the bride's sister, Mary.

They wore marguerites in their hair to match their white organdie frocks, with apple-green ribbon drawn through the ruching on the skirt.

No doubt, Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, will be charmed with the artistic colours which have been chosen for the extension to the Queen Victoria Seamen's Rest, which she is to open at Poplar.

A Chance For Debutantes. The Princess would much have liked to have laid the foundation-stone to this new building, but an outdoor function in January would have taxed her unduly, so it is at her own request that she is to perform the opening ceremony next month.

It is a work in which she is particularly interested, and one in which her mother, Queen Victoria, also took a great delight. She will find that the accommodation is now doubled since her earlier informal visits.

A buffet, open practically day and night, has given many women an opportunity of doing some of the worth while work that every modern hostess and debutante is eager to take up. With an increase of nearly seventy regular guests, the scope for their labours will be even greater.

How To Pose. The Lady Mayoress seemed to be taking a very great interest in the Exhibition of Portraiture at Princess Galleries when she visited it with the Lord Mayor. A surprising number of women were exhibiting.

What should a woman wear when she goes to the studio to pose for her photograph? For those who

(Continued from previous column). are photographed only very occasionally it is wise to remember that hats should never be worn, as they date a picture so much.

Miss Pearl Freeman, one of the exhibitors, always tries to persuade sitters not to have a full-length picture, as skirts vary in length with the changing fashions. The most successful photograph is the head and shoulder type.

Black is an ideal colour for the camera, it seems. Patterned materials are not so attractive. A plain gown emphasises slenderness.

The New Hats

MILLINERS with a reputation for smartness are still making dozens of caps, but they have also some straw the size of ten-trays.

There are new wide-brimmed straws with dull surfaces, either untrimmed, or encircled with the narrowness of ribbons.

There is also a new fashion. Velvet crowns are now put with straw brims, the velvet being black or a dark colour, but if a colour is used they never create violent contrasts. Brown and white is popular. But all-white is even more fashionable.

The Back View

HAVE you noticed how intricate are the backs to many of the new day frocks? They will surely tempt the wearer to dispense with her coat, even out-of-doors, on warm days.

A mass of bebe tucks at the back just misses being over-lavish. Bows, or a row of buttons are quaint, pretty and not to be hidden. Perhaps the back opening is a V or the pinafore effect slopes low at the back, the slip underneath being of the same material to ensure a perfect ensemble.

Dear Mrs. Beten,

The Permanent Wave you gave my hair is quite the best I have ever had. In fact the three times I have had it waved in your Beauty Parlour have all been most successful and I am delighted with the result. I shall miss very much not having you to come to for treatment and shampooing etc., as everything I have had done by you for the last two and a half years, that I have been living here, has been very satisfactory in the way of efficiency, cleanliness and good results.

Yours faithfully,
KATHERINE SAVILE.

SOUTH CHINA DEFEATED BY CLUB BEFORE OWN SUPPORTERS

LINCOLNS LOSE TO ARTILLERY
KOWLOON IMPROVEMENT CONTINUES

PURKINS SCORES SIX

87 GOALS IN 15 MATCHES IN DAY OF SURPRISES.

THE CLUB BEAT SOUTH CHINA YESTERDAY BY A GOAL SCORED BY E. STRANGE TO LEAD A LIST OF SURPRISING RESULTS. THE LINCOLNS LOWERED THEIR COLOURS TO THE ARTILLERY AND KOWLOON DEFEATED THE NAVY IN THE FIRST DIVISION, IN WHICH THE BORDERERS WERE THE ONLY TEAM TO LIVE UP TO THEIR REPUTATION.

A great second half recovery allowed the Borderers second string to maintain their 100 per cent. record, and the Navy and the Athletic scored 9 and 7 goals, respectively, Purkins claiming 6 for the Navy! The Lincolns suffered yet another set-back, their second team only drawing with Tung Tsin.

In the big match in the Third Division St. Joseph's triumphed over the Borderers by the odd goal. The Radio registered their second win in two seasons when they beat the University and the Engineers recorded their first win and first goals of the season at the expense of the Recreio.

E. STRANGE ROBS SOUTH CHINA OF 100 PER CENT.

Strange Badly Injured At Caroline Hill.

HOWE FAILS TO IMPRESS.

(By Spot Kick.)

IN a match that was far from brilliant South China had the mortification of sustaining defeat at the hands of the Club before their own supporters. It was a defeat inflicted on themselves by their over-confidence and erratic shooting.

A grim opening, with a struggle for supremacy, a well-planned goal for the remainder of the game, four defending, in which Rodger was again the hero.

Fung and Ip were fully aware of the uselessness of trying to beat Rodger with anything from outside the penalty area, with the result that, in trying to "walk" the ball into the net, Martin, S. Strange and Hynes were found to be stumbling blocks which failed to leave any gaps.

STRANGE INJURED.

Hynes was the better of the three, fully justifying his promotion by his keen tackling and correct passing of the ball. S. Strange, in his new position at pivot was not at all happy, and, with the exception of a few long kicks, proved of little aid to the Club forwards. He was, however, badly injured, and, although returning, the effects of his shaking failed to wear off.

The wing halves in Skinner and A. Duncan did a tremendous amount in helping to hold the wily Chinese forwards off. They were able to send up well-timed passes to their own forwards, who were, however, very patchy in their work.

Howe still failed to impress as an aspirant to Hong Kong Interport honours, being too closely watched by the clever Wong Mei-shun.

DOMINY FAILS.

He was, however, engaged in the movement that resulted in the only goal. Later in the game he was sent through, only to shoot wide in front of Lam. Dominy, another player to come within the selectors range, also failed to impress.

South China made several changes from the team that met the Borderers last Sunday, Leung Iu-chun dropping back to fill the absent Tam Kong-pak's place, whilst Wong Mei-shun returned to centre half. Fung King-cheung again led the attack into which Young Shui-yick made his debut.

There was nothing at all wrong with South China's defence, in which Lau Mau shined at left back with his brilliant positioning and place kicking.

The forwards, who had the sun at their backs in the opening half, opened up movements which showed full of promise, but before Rodger was tested, too much dilly-dallying resulted in a Club defender nipping in to clear. Chek Shu-kam made a splendid run to test Rodger, whose save conceded a corner. When Skinner centred for Howe to tap the ball to E. Strange, the only other occasion upon which neither sets of forwards were dangerous.

The Club should have scored again close on the interval, but Fowler was too slow when Lam was out of position.

CHINESE IMPROVE. South China improved considerably on the resumption and, Ip Pak-wa and Fung King-cheung looked as if they might turn the game in their favour. But other than the bringing of Rodger full length to save from Fung, their finish lacked sting. With Strange off for a few minutes, the Club were forced on the defensive, but whilst the Chinese failed to produce the shots expected of them, Rodger saved the few that were rained at him, as the result of his splendid anticipation.

The Club goal underwent a change of period when, from Cheuk's corner, Rodger had to fist the ball from the bar three times in as many seconds and then deflect the ball over the bar to save his charge.

South China remained much the better of the two teams until the end, but in failing to score had to leave the field pointless for the first time this season.

Result:—South China 0 Club 1

Sgt. Caswell, R.A., lined out the following teams:—South China:—Lam Tin-chang; Leung Iu-chun, Lau Mau; Tong Kwan, Wong Mei-shun, Leung Wing-chui, and Cheng Sui-hong; Yeung Shui-yick, Fung King-cheung, Ip Pak-wa and Cheuk Shu-kam.

Club:—Rodger; Martin, Hynes; Skinner, S. Strange, A. Duncan; Williams, Dominy, Howe, E. Strange and Fowler.

LINCOLNS LEAD TWICE BUT LOSE GAME.

Heath Injured But Is Able To Resume.

BRYANT'S "HAT TRICK".

(By Spot.)

AFTER being a goal in arrears at the interval, the Artillery fought back splendidly in their match against the Lincolns at Soekunpo, to win the encounter by the odd goal in five.

The Lincolns were without Barber, their star pivot, Worrall filling the position, while Woody deputized for Hildoy. Thus with Hackett being retained at full back, the Lincolns fielded three reserves. The Artillery team was unchanged.

The Lincolns failed to get going with the splendid team-work that was so much admired upon their arrival here, and fell away considerably after the interval for the good defensive work of Allen and Taylor to be well rewarded when Bryant, the Gunners' leader, added two further goals to complete his "hat trick."

The R. A. goal fell early in the game, when Harding headed through from Kirkham, but Bryant went through to equalise within a few minutes, ending a splendid run with a well-placed shot.

The Lincolns at this stage were enjoying more of the game, but the sturdy defenders of the R.A. were found to be a hard obstacle to encounter. Taylor had the misfortune to handle inside the "box" and Kirkham made no mistake with the spot kick, to give the Lincolns the lead again.

The R.A. enjoyed a brief spell of attacking and Bryant was seen as a worthy leader in supplying Wood and Seal with well-placed passes, but the shooting was weak.

In the second half Pardoe was enabled to ply his forwards with well-placed passes and from a raid that caught the Lincolns' defence spread eagle, Bryant sent in a long range shot to beat Heath and bring the scores level again.

The Lincolns, suffering from this surprise reverse, retaliated strongly, but found Pardoe and his colleagues in fine fettle, with the result that little headway by the Lincolns' forwards was seen. As the result of a collision with an R. A. forward, Heath was injured and was forced to leave the field. Higgins donned the goalkeeper's jersey, but Heath returned after a few minutes, during which nothing to jeopardise the scores level again.

The R.A. continued on the offensive and with both wingers being fully extended in keeping out Bryant, who was playing a splendid game of close passing with Moore and Gough. From one of these movements, Bryant beat Heath with an almost unstopable shot to give the Gunners the lead.

Result:—Lincolns 2 R.A. 3

Lincolns:—Heath, Turner, Hackett; Dudley, Worrall, Bett; Kirkham, Woody, Higgins, Harding and Baldy.

R.A.:—Comby; Allen, Taylor, Collier, Pardoe, Rodgers; Wood, Gough, Bryant, Moore and Seal.

BORDERERS RUN LOOSE AT KING'S PARK

Jones Master Schemer of Fine Attack

RECREIO WELL TROUNCED

(By Cross Bar)

AT King's Park the Recreio again conceded a glut of goals, losing by nine clear goals, this time to the Borderers. The score hardly represents the superiority of the Borderers, who were never extended and toyed with the opposition and exceeded in passing movements.

The Borderers forwards as soon as they realised what they were up against, treated the spectators with a pattern weaving exhibition and Ogley and never were run off their feet.

Ogley was strong in defence until he moved to centre forward, but the Recreio halves were weak, and so little was seen of the forwards that Mullane and Williams, the latter deputising for Morrison, spent most of their time in their opponents' half.

The Borderers started off with a fine passing bout and play settled down in the Recs' goalmouth, and Remedios was forced to save shots from Jones, Pallister and Harris. Jones, however, went through and dribbling round the Recs' defence opened the scoring with a good shot. The Borderers returned to the attack and Davis added the second with a low shot. Ogley now went to centre forward, but the change proved unavailing, and in an unbroken movement in which the ball went from man to man with a workmanlike precision, Davis added another for the Borderers. It was now a tale of goals and Duncan made the total four.

The Recs. forwards now made their first real attempt but Rocha's shot went wide. Another attempt by the same player just grazed the cross-bar.

LEAGUE CHAMPIONS EXTENDED

Exciting Game With Civil ServantsJunior Eleven Also Win
By Narrow Margin

ERIC MITCHELL TOP SCORER

A. D. LOWSON TAKES 9 FOR 21 TO HEAD BOWLERS' LIST.

AFTER HAVING SKITTLED OUT THE CHAMPIONS FOR A TOTAL OF 79 THE CIVIL SERVICE CRICKET CLUB HAD SCORED 48 FOR THE LOSS OF RICHARDSON AND G. R. SAYER AND LOOKED LIKE COMMENCING THE SEASON IN GREAT STYLE. BUT THEIR LAST EIGHT WICKETS FELL FOR 23 RUNS AND THE INDIAN RECREATION CLUB WON BY 8 RUNS. IT WAS A CLOSE THING FOR THE CHAMPIONS.

In the junior division the L.R.C., junior champions, defeated the R.A.S.C. by the narrow margin of 7 runs, thus recording their second win in three games.

The features of the match on the H.K.C.C. ground were the batting of Eric Mitchell (76) and Sub-Lt. Carver (60), and the bowling of A. C. Beck (5 for 53). In a high scoring match, in which Tom Hayward made a welcome return to form, the Club managed to hold a strong Services' team to a draw.

Magnificent bowling by A. D. Lowson, who took 9 Records wickets for 21 runs, gave the Club second eleven a win at King's Park by a very small margin in a low scoring game.

League I.

Tennis players overseas have been waiting years for just such a racket as the new Spalding "LAMINA" MULTI-PLY. The frame is made of several layers of Ash and Birch woods, which provide a rigid frame that gives terrific pace to the ball as it leaves the racket. Spalding have tested this racket in actual play under all conditions, and in tropical climates, and not a single frame has broken, not one has warped a fraction of an inch.

THE CALL FOR RIGID ECONOMY

Sir Eric Geddes Warns
NationEnterprise Bludgeoned By Tax-Gatherer

BORROWING NO CURE

By Sir Eric Geddes, Chairman of the famous "Geddes Committee" appointed, 1921-1922, by the then Chancellor of the Exchequer to report on National Expenditure.

THE Government has an overwhelming mandate from the country to put its finances right. Eight months ago, the electorate became aware of a crisis, and, since that time, Parliament has sought to discover means to lift the country out of the slough of financial and commercial depression. Economy is one of the essentials to recovery.

The people must be educated to realise the fallacy of the popular notion of gold-digging. John Bull must be shown the danger of demanding of the Treasury unlimited expenditure for objects which, however desirable, cannot be indulged at this time. They must recognise the fact that they cannot receive from the Government any advantages or material things which they do not eventually pay for themselves.

The country must also be taught that the principle of borrowing for the purpose of extending public improvements, as a means of spending its way out of depression, is a principle which has brought disaster to every person, firm, and nation that has ever tried it.

Words to this effect were used recently by a great American industrialist, Mr. Ford, of the Ford Company of U.S.A. They apply to our own case with equal truth.

Some ten years ago I was associated with an Economy Committee appointed by Sir Robert Horne when he was Chancellor of the Exchequer. I think I am right in saying that Sir Robert Horne's action in appointing that committee resulted in the only really substantial cuts which were made in national expenditure after the war, until the crisis last year.

Another committee has recently been appointed, and has made its recommendations. The Government has before it the considered opinion of a very competent committee. It is now called upon to exercise courage in giving effect to the economies recommended.

Educate The Country!

But it is one of the inevitable features of democratic Government that we cannot expect change and reform unless we educate the country so that the wish of the people is to economise in national expenditure.

Successive Chancellors of the Exchequer have had to decide how best to spread the burden of taxation, be it direct or indirect, and I am sure that I will not offend the present or past Chancellors if I say that the number of electors affected by adjustments of the burden is not absent from the minds of Chancellors when they frame their budgets. Not only are Chancellors mindful of the numbers affected, but also they are apt to consider those most vocal.

Crippling Burden. It is not surprising, therefore, that the politically inarticulate, limited liability company should, through successive years, find itself even more adversely affected by direct taxation than the individual taxpayer. It is this burden upon industry which is hampering enterprise more than any other contributory cause.

It has become a truism that industry is being crippled or killed by the impossible burden of taxes, and yet few know what that burden is or how it is assessed or paid. In Parliament and in White Hall five out of ten may, perhaps, understand it, but in the country as a whole not one in a thousand. Yet this crippling burden upon industry is going to ruin the country if it is not relieved.

The ordinary man in the street knows nothing of the methods of the assessment of the companies in dry, which, perhaps, he and his family are deeply interested. Yet these methods are sucking the life-blood of industry.

I can best illustrate what I mean by the following example.

Not Taxation, But Confiscation.

At the annual general meeting of a company of which I am chairman I said: "In the final analysis, Ordinary stockholders are left with a sum of £380,000 income-tax burden, and there is no margin out of which to meet this liability, which, in consequence, has to be provided out of the undistributed profits and reserves accumulated by you in past years."

This is by no means a unique situation. Now it means that on a poundage rate of 5s. in the pound, for income-tax, after Debenture interest and Preference dividends have been paid, and the tax recovered from the recipients and reserved for the Inland Revenue, there was a balance owing to the Inland Revenue on the year of £380,000 more than the stockholder had profits from which to pay it.

Any method of assessment which can give that result can never have been intended, and cannot be justified. I will put it in another way. In a year when the stockholders of the equity of a large industrial organisation can receive no dividend, the law enforces the payment to the tax-gatherer out of past profits reserved in the undertaking of a sum equivalent to a 5 per cent. dividend gross on the Ordinary stock, and the stockholders have to find this out of what, to the individual, would be his savings or capital.

This is not taxation of profits — it is confiscation of property! In such circumstances how can industry prosper? How can we compete with the world?

How can we equip our works with modern machinery which is essential to trade promotion? How can we expect a free flow of capital into industry?

Fictitious Assessments. Need we wonder that the drift of public investment is into fixed interest-bearing securities, rather than into undertakings where the methods of assessment amount to confiscation of the industrial investor's property?

This assessment, I may say, is based upon a set of accounts to which no self-respecting director or auditor would put his signature — an entirely fictitious figure of profits. And what is the result? The result is seen in the figures of annual investments in Home Industries.

Sir Arthur Salter estimates that at the close of last century, out of the £200,000,000 invested annually in Home Industries, only £18,000,000 was found through the money market, the rest being found out of savings of those connected with the business, mainly as Ordinary shares, and owned by investors who shared the ordinary trading risks, knew the business, and therefore reinvested their savings in it.

A Callous State.

In recent years, however, the position has been completely reversed, and £170,000,000 out of £200,000,000 has been drawn annually from the money market. This means a considerable increase in the provision of Preference and Debenture capital, which takes little risk; but the prior claims of this capital constitute a dead weight on the industry concerned in times of trade depression.

As a result, the investor has turned from industrial investment to fixed interest-bearing securities, and the industrial sponge is squeezed dry.

The State has become a sleeping partner in industry, taking little or no risk, but with a club in its hand, extracting all it can squeeze from industry, callous of the future.

Taxing Reserves.

I am glad to observe that Lord Snowden, in the course of a debate on economy in the House of Lords, made some useful remarks on this subject. A high income-tax, he said, had an undoubtedly bad psychological effect. It discouraged enterprise, made people in industry less plucky, and made them feel: "Well, what is the use of going on?" That psychological effect could not be ignored, and, moreover, it reduced the sums available for saving.

Lord Snowden went on to say: "I have always held the view that, if the finance of this country would permit it, something ought to be done to deal with the undoubted hardship which is inflicted on companies by the taxation of the sums they place in reserve."

Will-To-Adventure.

I am glad to have this opinion from the late Socialist Chancellor of the Exchequer. And I would like to draw the attention of the present and future Chancellors to this fact: Before the war 70 per cent. of the national savings went into industrial trials. To-day only 30 per cent. goes into industrial — of course, from a lower level of savings!

Prior charges, including the consistory actions of the Inland Revenue, have reduced the chances of a reasonably attractive dividend for the industrial investor, and with the high burden of taxation assessed as it is, the risks of adventuring his capital is so great and the reward, after taxation, so small, that he prefers not to adventure his capital at all.

The will-to-adventure is fast being killed; yet it was upon this adventure that our great national heritage was built. Now, cowed and bludgeoned by the tax-gatherer, we run for safety and the long grass!

Prophecies Tell Of Future War

New Civilisation May Emerge From Chaos

DOES MANKIND PROGRESS?

(By K. B. Vaidya.)

"Old Order Changeth Yielding Place to New"—Tennyson.

THE search for happiness in the present unhappy world, the discontent found everywhere, the dissatisfaction with the present social order, the international rivalry for world supremacy, the newer and grander ideas coming into existence from day to day apparently with a view to evolve a better order of Society, and the advancement in Science with its so-called discoveries and inventions said to aid the material well-being of the people, have led many to ask "Whither we are progressing, Why and How?"

The Political atmosphere in almost all the countries is surcharged with dynamic movements. Radical changes are taking place since the last War, and yet people are not satisfied with them. The spirit of Democracy is slowly vanishing yielding place to a desire for "Dictatorship." The Party system is becoming an anachronism and an out-lived system, and nations are required to form National Governments on Non-party basis. Those countries, that have virtual Dictatorships, appear to be progressing satisfactorily. Still people are trying to evolve new systems to suit their advanced ideas of Governments. In those countries, which are ruled by the foreigners, benevolent or oppressive though the rule may be, the people are trying to assert themselves.

In international politics, the race for world supremacy and world markets is embittering the international relations; and, what with Geneva Conferences, the Disarmament Conference, the Lytton Report, and the Washington Agreements, the thirst for newer weapons of destruction is growing stronger and stronger. Every nation is suspicious of the other, and is secretly forging deadly instruments—weapons to annihilate their enemies. All the Treaties, including the Nine Power Pact, are being thrown to the winds, as scraps of paper, and are used by nations only if they advance their own interests. Similar treatment is accorded to all those offensive and defensive alliances between one nation and another.

Economic Puzzle.
In the field of Economics, the fall in prices is the ruling cry. The substitution of the principle of Territorial Division of Labour by the "National Self-sufficiency" based on "Self-determination," has led to over production in the world, and the fall in prices is the result. "National self-sufficiency" has created a sense of aloofness and selfishness; and although it may put a stop to exploitation by others, has, nevertheless, led to those petty jealousies and rivalries amongst nations in securing international markets. The "Age of Machinery" has overdone itself and helped "over production." It has further precipitated the fall in prices, besides throwing a portion of population out of employment.

The luxuries of the city life obtained by higher wages, have created a taste for city life in the minds of the working classes and an aversion for agriculture. Thus, the mainstay of this world, the source of all wealth, is deteriorating.

The state of international exchanges is becoming appalling. In the first place, the instability of Government in several countries is shaking confidence; and, in the second place, "Gold" the acknowledged standard for these exchanges, is proving a very tricky customer.

Riot of Reform.
In the social sphere, so-called civilisation and social reforms are running riot. In the early days woman was almost free; then came a time when her liberty was substantially curtailed, so much so that in some places they became chattels of man and were practically hidden from the world. But the reaction soon came, and with vengeance. The "freedom" of woman became the cry of the day and her relations with man are undergoing radical changes. The taste of earning money and thereby living independently of man, has made woman averse to marriage. There are, in some countries, more divorces than marriages. New theories have arisen in this sphere. From contract marriages for a certain period renewable at the discretion of either parties, the choice has shifted to "Companionate" marriages. Unwillingness to marry has already narrowed down the number of married couples. The desire for high living by restricting the number of children by contraceptive methods, has in some countries created a problem of under-population, and the Governments of those countries have been paying premiums for new-born children.

Family is Perishing.
The sense of parental duties and filial affection is slowly vanishing. The respect for parents and the affection for children are submerged in the desire for personal happiness and comfort. Religious beliefs are required to stand the test of inquiry, and a stage of doubting and agnosticism prevails. Rationalism is slowly taking place of the old religious tenets; and in spite of the efforts of the protagonists of all of the Religions, people are every day drifting away from the Church and the Church Laws.

It will thus be seen that in spite of all human efforts in the field of Science, Politics, Economics, and Sociology, people appear to be dissatisfied with their present environments and the soul seems to be writhing to get out of them. Science, though, it appears to aid to the human efforts, is also proving destructive to the safety of the people and the world in general. These are apparent signs of decay in Social, Political and Economic institutions, and all the pet theories, pet beliefs, and pet principles appear to be thrown to the winds. Revolutionary changes in almost every order, are bringing unhappiness instead of happiness and in spite of the great efforts that are being made by nations to bring contentment to their people, the process of decay does not stop.

Heading For War.
The world is heading towards a catastrophic fall. The present unbusiness, discontent and the disruption in the social and political relations will soon accelerate and inevitably lead to a World War more serious than the last. The destruction of the excess and unemployed population, the devastation of the property, the waste of the present wealth of nations, almost complete extinction of national energies for another war, the aversion towards fresh hostilities, divisions of the world into smaller and compact nationalities—these will come in the wake of such a World War. The prophecies of the Bible, and those given in the Indian Mythologies, and Egyptian Pyramids for the destruction of the world whenever general discontent prevails and sin scores a victory over virtue, will come true, and a new world based on simplicity will emerge out of the chaos.

The social order will revert to the olden, or rather medieval period, in which the "Family" will be dominant, and child-bearing will be considered a virtue. The principle of "Live and let live" will supersede that of "Self interest," and real yearning towards a universal brotherhood will be created, although the number of nations will increase. There is, therefore, every possibility that a newer, a nobler, a simpler and a more accommodating world will emerge out of the present chaos and discontent. Thus, one cosmic cycle will be completed and will give rise to another, wherein the pre-eminent desire will be for a simpler and a nobler life. "God" fulfils Himself in many ways, and the human efforts will be placed on a higher pedestal for securing the happiness of the mankind.

Disarmament.

THE outstanding, and the most cheerful, news of the week is contained in the cables from London, Washington, Berlin, Geneva and Paris reporting an improved and more conciliatory tone in the disarmament discussions. Prospects of a definite agreement at the forthcoming Arms Conference are now immeasurably brighter, and the new spirit of co-operation arouses the utmost optimism. Following the futile, wearying debate at the original Conference, which opened in February and dragged on for months without accomplishing anything of real consequence, the general public reaction was one of disappointment and despair. Recently the many complicated plans of the various nations have been modified, and the adjustments made to meet the concessions mutually granted appear likely to lead to eventual arrival at unanimity. The first reassuring news was the announcement that Germany would agree to adoption of the French plan as a basis for discussion. As Germany's defiant attitude and insistence on arms parity had threatened to ruin even the preliminary work of the Conference this change of front is of great significance. The new French plan is still based on the principle of mutual assistance to quell any major disturbance in Europe but is not as far-reaching as the late M. Briand's sweeping suggestion for the establishment of an international army to "police" Europe. Actuated by a desire to accord with Great Britain and the United States, France is now pursuing a policy which is less dominated by military ambition. Doubtless, realisation of her tremendous military superiority over her neighbours is a factor in this policy. Great Britain has always evinced a sincere desire to effect a big reduction in the world's armaments and the latest London proposal, announced yesterday, to limit, and control, all military aircraft should form a further valuable contribution to the negotiations. Britain, in accordance with her expressed intentions, has reduced her military and naval strength on a large scale but other nations have not followed this lead. British people, apprehensive at the large reductions already made, are not unnaturally opposed to any further move until a guarantee is offered that the rest of the world will do likewise. One of the most valuable schemes advanced was that of President Hoover who advocated a general one-third reduction of all armaments by all nations, and there are indications that an agreement on this principle may be effected. Announcement that Japan is formulating new proposals is perturbing to those who consider her an aggressively militarist nation. But Tokyo may offer a genuine suggestion in order to make a favourable impression and regain some of the prestige lost during the past year. Unless any further hitch occurs it seems that the delegates will approach the coming Conference with a definite purpose of achieving some agreement towards a general reduction in armaments. Former conferences have been prejudiced by the bargaining attitude of the delegates and a general atmosphere of distrust, but there is now every evidence that statesmen recognise that international co-operation is essential to settle one of the world's major problems. The depression makes the Conference most opportune as all nations want to reduce the crippling burden of military expenditure. If the forthcoming Conference fails the outlook for the future is gloomy as the prospects of agreement during times of prosperity are almost negligible.

Correspondence.

PADRE CRITICISED.

(To the Editor, "Sunday Herald.")

Sir.—The "Local Padre", whose article you published in your columns on Sunday last, when comparing Islam with Christianity has not only shown his ignorance of the teaching of the Holy Prophet Mohammed but has also revealed his deep-rooted animosity and bigotry towards the faith of Islam.

Mohammed had never been to a school and could neither read nor write. But he placed before the world the book which is unique in the beauty of its language and the excellence of its teachings. A challenge was thrown to the world over 13 centuries ago in the following words: "And if you are in doubt as to that which We have revealed to Our servant, then produce a chapter like it and call on your helpers besides Allah if you are truthful." 2:23. The challenge has not yet been accepted by anybody until this day. Is not the Quran a sufficient miracle of Mohammed to show that he was a prophet, and is the Padre justified in saying that Mohammed "definitely disclaimed miraculous power when challenged to prove his role of prophet by exhibiting it?"

Whenever the Padre has referred to Mohammed in the article above referred to he has misrepresented facts. If the Christians in the West are rapidly embracing Islam and the empty pews and Churches are in ever-increasing number sounding the death-bells of the Padre, power and prestige, let the Christian preachers honestly face the facts instead of trying to mislead the public.

"LOOK-SEE".

PADRE REPLIES

To the Editor, "Sunday Herald."

Sir.—The letter "In Defence of Islam" in your last issue rose to heights of eloquence, even if at times it descended into abuse, which is so often the case when people are stuck for an argument. Mr. Mehal speaks in a somewhat alighting way of "holy looking creatures of God, in the garb of 'Christian Priests'." It was one of these—Father Damien—who went to Molokai, and gave his life for the lepers. I have not yet heard of a Muslim priest (clad in whatever robes they may chance to wear) doing the same. Similar "creatures" for 2000 years have been going into the dark places of the earth, with the light of the gospel of Christ, bringing healing and hope to suffering thousands—what has Islam done for the outcasts of India for the festering beggars in Egypt—left them to rot and die unless they are tended by Christian Missions.

It is good to know that "Europe owes all that is good and noble in its civilization to the adoption of the true principles first expounded in the Holy Quran." The Sermon on the Mount was spoken by Christ nearly 600 years before the "Holy Quran" was even thought of, and the Christian nations of Europe would be somewhat surprised to know the glad news that they owe all to Mohammed, of whom 99% of them know nothing. They have heard however of the crusades, and the treatment of Christian pilgrims when Islam held sway, and the fate of Christians when they have fallen into Muslim hands. They also know something about Wilberforce, and Shaftesbury, and Lister, to mention only three men to whom Europe is in a moral practical debt (as far as they can see).

Questions Achievement.

The statement "The marvellous effect upon the minds of men produced by Islam" sounds very fine, but what is it? What has it done? In what way has Islam done anything to better the world—the conditions under which people live—their housing—their sanitation—their health. My own experience is that the sanitation of an Arab Village leaves something to be desired.

Has the religion of Mohammed produced one man who has made his mark upon the world's history for good, much less one nation of race, which is anywhere in the scale of civilization?

That is the acid test. What has it ever done for its own people to uplift them, educate them, doctor them? The first chance they get they obtain "western education" wear western clothes, live in the atmosphere of Christian civilization.

THE LESSON IN EUROPE

(By E. L. Allen.)

I HAVE been greatly interested of late in the new road which is in process of construction in the neighbourhood of Kowloon Docks. When I first passed there a few months ago, the view was obstructed by a solid mass of hill-side which seemed to defy any attack. Today, that hill has been cut, clean through and a view opens out upon what lies beyond it. All over the peninsula the same sort of thing is taking place. "Moving mountains" is a proverbial expression for what is difficult, but here the thing is actually being done; the crooked is being made straight and the rough places plain.

To be sure, one wonders sometimes what Kowloon will be like when the process is completed. Shall we be robbed of all our hills and be condemned to live in a place which is of one dead level everywhere, with shops and tenements of the same pattern confronting us wherever we turn? If so, it will only be what is happening everywhere to-day: in East and West alike there is being developed a uniform mentality and a standardised type of life.

But I am not at the moment concerned with anything so remote as that. What interests me, particularly is the method that is employed, the enormous amount of human labour which goes to the making of such a road. These hills are like fortresses which yield in the end to the massed attack of thousands, flung against them in wave after wave, till at last their powers of resistance are worn out. One sees the hill being broken up beneath the hammer of hundreds of men, women, and children, and being carried away all day long in baskets, bit by bit. Each person who is employed on the job contributes something so small as to be almost imperceptible, but the final result of all their labour is to change the whole face of the neighbourhood. I have often thought that there is where they can earn money, and live on a scale impossible under their own regime.

I do not know what amenities of Hong Kong, (in which presumably Mr. Mehal lives) are due to the influence of Mohammed and his enlightening and uplifting religion. As far as I know it was Colonised and built by British hands and industry, and Mr. Mehal and his fellow Muslims are only too glad to live in the comforts which western ideals have given them, and under the toleration which the Protestant Religion extends to their beliefs, a somewhat different condition and atmosphere to that of lands where Islam is predominant.

No Contradiction.

With reference to polygamy, (which the average man always connects with Islam) I note that Mr. Mehal does not contradict the fact that Mohammed allowed his followers four wives, or forbade them to take what women they could in their campaigns, or that the best heaven (i.e. the best women) is reserved for the faithful who die in battle against the infidels, a singularly inspiring hope!

In assessing the value of any religion, we Westerners (in our simplicity) ask the question,—"how does it regard our women," whom we regard as our equals, and not as chattels to be cast aside on the least pretext. I have yet to learn that European women are flocking to the standard of Islam, with all its enlightenment. They know to whom they owe their freedom and their liberty. It is not to Mohammed.

Whether or not Mohammed's wives came to him of their own free will, his position is summed up, in the equivalent remark of an old Scotsman who, when told that Solomon had 600 wives, remarked that he was a highly privileged Christian!

Yours,

A READER.

something of a parable here. There is a picture in it of how the good cause carried to success in this world, not by some brilliant and startling achievement so much as by the steady pegging away of a great number of individuals whose heart is in the work.

Tactics of War.

I remember the new tactics which were introduced towards the end of the war, at least on that part of the Western Front known to myself. At the time, most of us associated the change with the unification of command under Marshal Foch and the fusing of French with British methods. Up to that time, the regular procedure had been to hold a sector of the line for months on end without doing anything of note, and then to stage an offensive on a large or small scale. There were weeks of preparation, during which quills often the secret leaked out, the infantry went over, and a communication was sent home announcing that a hundred yards of trench had been taken but not saying too much about the casualties which had been suffered. The new policy was one of continual and tireless activity.

If a subaltern could detect the position of a machine-gun in the enemy lines, let him take a few men and go out the next night and see if he could not put it out of action. If a lance-corporal with five men in a shell-hole found all was clear in front of him, let him crawl forward another fifty yards and drop into a shell-hole there. Reliance was to be placed in future not simply on elaborate operations the secret of which might easily be discovered, but on a steady pressure exerted day and night from the Swiss frontier to the coast of Belgium, till the enemy resistance collapsed as a rock might after the sea has eaten away at its base for a thousand years.

Desire of Despair.

The evils in the world seem at times so secure and so deeply-rooted that we despair of ever being able to dispossess them. We wish for some magnificent, blasting operation which will send up into the air a glorious column of dust and smoke—and incidentally do a great deal of unnecessary damage! But there is a more effective way of getting to work, and that is for each man to ply unflinchingly his own hammer and to carry his own basket filled with earth. If I wait for the world to change, that will take a long time to happen. If I begin by changing my own bit of it, I may be surprised to discover that there are thousands of others who are engaged on the same enterprise. War, disease, poverty, the wrongs of little children—all these will yield at last to the quiet persistence and determination of individuals.

When a bronchial catarrh is not heeded sufficiently or treated with inadequate remedies, there is the possibility of a serious pulmonary affection making its appearance. The bad consequences of such disease, especially in the tropics, are evident. ## The GLOBE TROTTER'S DIARY.

Mr. Montagu Norman - - -
Few people ever see Mr. Montagu Norman, the Governor of the Bank of England. But a portrait model of him has been added to the famous Tussaud collection in Marylebone-road. There, also, are models of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Molison and Mr. de Valera.

Excavations at Jericho - - -
Sir Charles Marston, who has been such a generous friend to Palestinian archaeology in the last few years, told me that he is arranging with Professor Garstang to continue his excavations at Jericho.

In the coming season—work is only possible in the winter months—the hope is to complete the exploration of the site of the palace. Meanwhile Sir Charles has just finished a monograph descriptive of the discoveries at Jericho, and what, in his judgment, they involve.

Queen Marie's Reminiscences - - -
The Dowager Queen Marie of Roumania, who is staying at Meudon, near Vienna, with her daughter, Princess Ileana, is working on a book of reminiscences, to be called "My Book." Two volumes are finished.

The Queen is writing in English, and begins her story in England, telling her childhood memories of how she used to play at Windsor at the feet of her grand mother, Queen Victoria.

She then takes the reader to Petersburg, where the Tsar Alexander II, her maternal grandfather, held her in his arms as a baby. She also speaks of her childhood in Malta, where her father, then Duke of Edinburgh, was Governor.

The mother, Carmen Sylva, was always, says the Queen, a "mystical person, a believer in the Russian, Orthodox faith, while her children were Protestants."

America's Grand Old Lady - - -
The political power enjoyed by American women to-day is largely due to one woman—Mrs. O. P. H. Belmont. She is the mother of Mme. Jacques Balsan, formerly Duchess of Marlborough, and the grandmother of the Marquess of Blandford and Lord Ivor Churchill. Her first husband was Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Belmont played a leading part in the campaign for women's suffrage in America and was founder and president of the Political Equality Association.

To-day, at the age of 76, she takes a less active part in politics, but she is still a wonderful old lady capable of holding her own with anyone. She attributes her health to the fact that she sleeps only four hours a day. Sleep, she holds, is man's nearest state to death. Too much of it atrophies both mind and muscles.

Italy's Red Sea Colony - - -
It is feared that the King of Italy's initial glimpse of Eritrea, the Italian colony on the Red Sea, which he is to visit for the first time, is likely to prove uninspiring. Its barren and sandy shore, which stretches monotonously for 700 miles, looks as sullen and inhospitable as that land from which the Israelites fled. Out of a total population of half a million fewer than 4,000 are Italians.

The port of Massawa does a flourishing trade in skins and salt, but otherwise the value of Italy's only Red Sea colony, however it may serve Mussolini's visions of a new Roman Empire, is more sentimental than real.

Marx to Music - - -
Music, as well as literature, has now been harnessed to the chariot of the Five-Year Plan in Moscow. An event of the autumn season has been the first performance of Minusovskii's symphony "Kolchessnala," a work designed, in the composer's words, "to stimulate production in the collective farms."

Still more fantastic is the announcement of a new cantata to be performed at the fifteenth anniversary of the November revolution. It is by Alexander Krein, a well-known composer, and is in three parts. The first part will contain texts from Marx's "Das Kapital," the second extracts from Lenin's speeches, and the third Stalin's weightiest pronouncements on the Five-Year Plan.

Stalin has no ear for music, but Lenin, like Marx, had an orthodox preference for Beethoven. It is doubtful if he would have listened to the new Bolshevik cacophony, even though he would have approved its revolutionary nature.

Training German Youth - - -

It would be a mistake to interpret President Hindenburg's decree providing for the military training of German youth as a defiance of France and the Disarmament Conference. That the scheme is militarist in its conception is undeniable, but it was revolving in General Schleicher's mind long before the "right to arm" dispute with France became acute.

Apart from its purely military aspect, it has two primary objects: to instill into the youth of Germany duty to the State as against duty to party, and to bring the young men in the private armies as much as possible under the control of the State.

General Schleicher's influence is plainly seen in the appointment of General von Stulpnagel as controller of the training camps. The two men have long been close friends.

The Plight Of Coal - - -

Eight hundred thousand men are employed in the British coal trade, the country being the second largest coal-producing country in the world. The United States comes first, with a production nearly twice as large. The total annual output of Great Britain is between 300 and 320 million tons, but for the first half of the present year the output was only 111,278,000 tons, a decrease of 18 million tons on 1930. In the first half of 1930 coal exports were 28.5 million tons, in 1931 21.2 million tons, and in 1932 18.8 million tons; and at the same time domestic consumption has fallen from 100.7 million tons for the first half of 1930 to 91.4 million tons for the first half of the present year. Much of the decrease in exports is due to the fact that France, Germany, Belgium and Italy are all taking less coal owing to restrictions imposed by their respective Governments. On the other hand, Canada is now taking British coal in increasing quantities, and the coal trade is looking for a revival of trade activity at home to increase demand for domestic consumption. Much is hoped for in connection with the new colloidal fuel, as its success will mean great things to the coal industry.

RECEIVING ORDER AGAINST CLERK.

Prison Threatened,
Counsel Claims.

A receiving order for a monthly contribution of $90 a month was made against Mario Rocha, when the hearing of his petition was held yesterday in the Supreme Court before the Chief Justice, Sir Joseph Kemp.

Mr. F. C. E. Rendall, of Russ and Co., appeared on behalf of the petitioner, while Mr. E. L. Agassiz, the Official Receiver, conducted the examination.

The petitioner, a clerk employed at the Navy, Army, and Air Force Institute, filed a petition for bankruptcy on October 8 last. The Official Receiver opposed the petition.

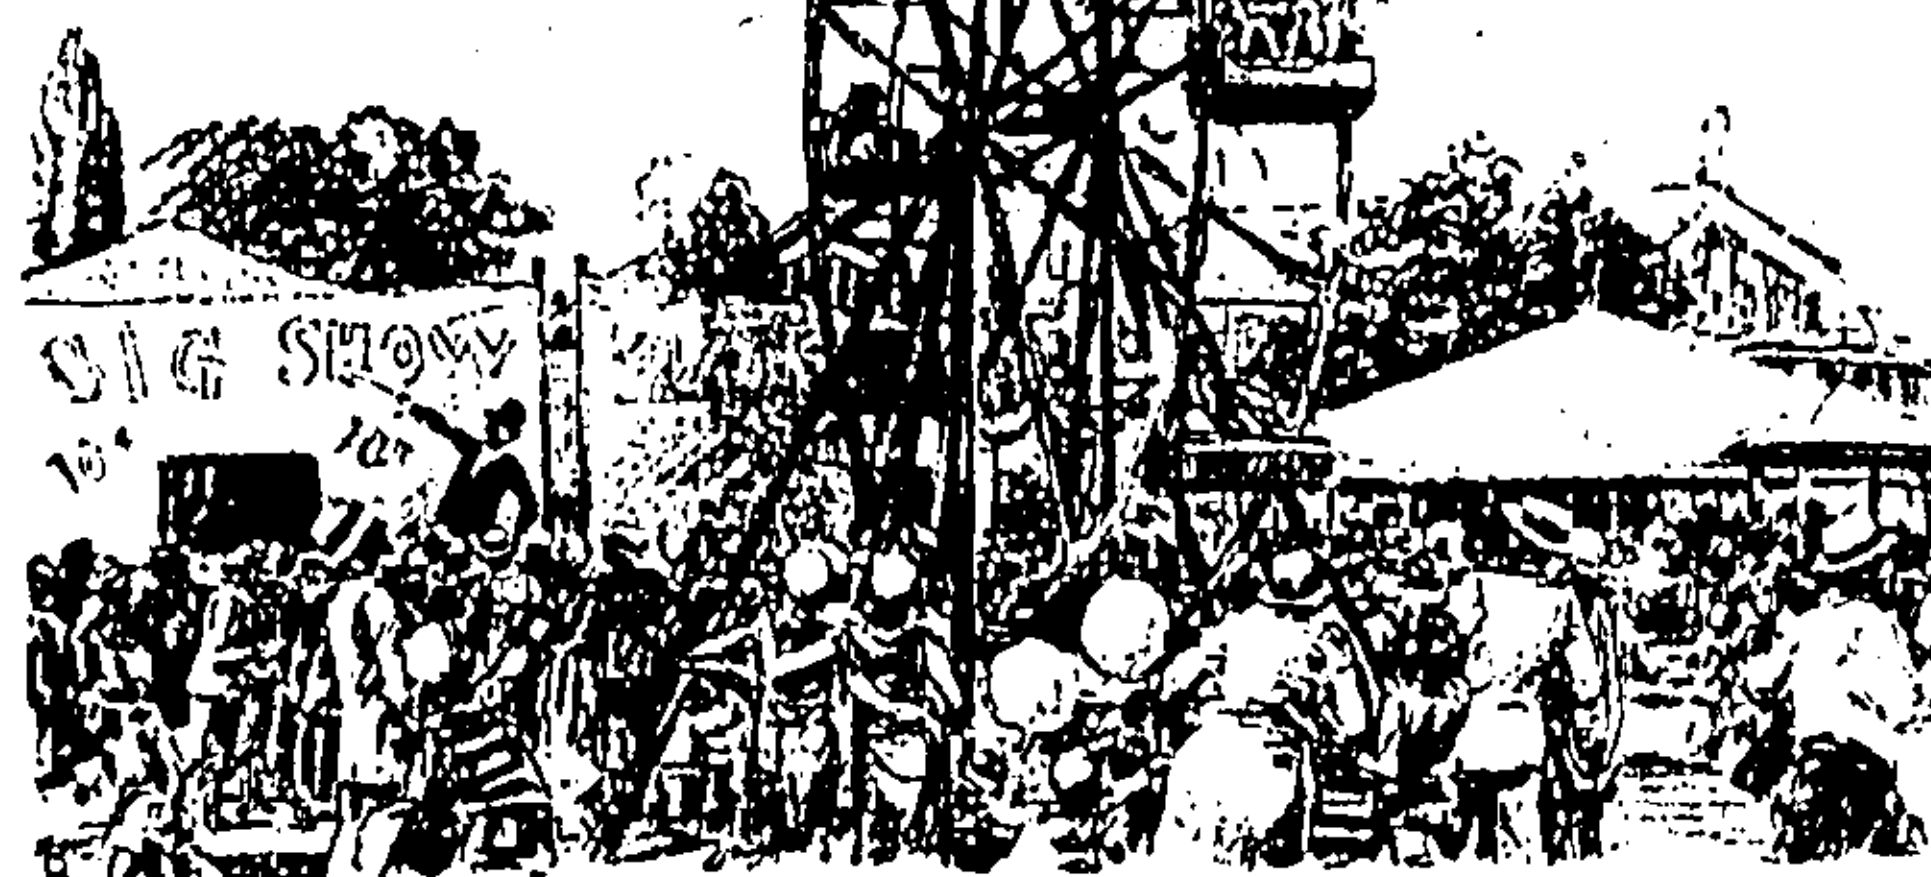

Counsel stated that if no order was made, the creditors would probably take their own course and send the prisoner to gaol, which would result in nobody receiving anything.

His Lordship said that the Official Receiver's examination tended to show that the petitioner's estimate of expenses were too high, but if the petitioner made every endeavour to try and settle his insolvencies, there was no reason why an order should not be made.

His Lordship made an order for $90 a month.

"Love Me To-night" They Pray! Fame Answers!

"Love Me To-night!" That's a plea that has almost entirely a romantic connotation. As the title of Maurice Chevalier's latest picture, now showing at the King's Theatre, it means nothing else.

But there was a time in the life of the star, and of Jeanette MacDonald and Charlie Ruggles, who head the cast supporting him, that it meant something entirely different—something like: "Please, pull—ease! Like me, applaud me, give me a break!"

Chevalier addressed it to an audience in a Paris music hall, Miss MacDonald to a theatrical producer, and Ruggles to the audience at a performance of a San Francisco stock company.

Prays For Break.

Chevalier's plea, "Love Me To-night!" was made a little over ten years ago. The French actor was a "comique" at a Paris music hall, and had a large following. But he was not the too-did, straw-hatted figure that movie audiences now know. He appeared on the stage in what corresponds to the makeup used by American burlesque-show comedians—a huge red puffy nose, a battered hat, and baggy, checkered trousers.

One night, in his dressing room, he was making up. Suddenly he stopped. He was sick of his make-up, and he was through with them, for good, he hoped. He wiped off the make-up, put on his tuxedo, picked up a straw hat, and strode out into the wings.

At his cue, he pranced out onto the stage, addressing a silent prayer to the audience to "love me to-night." And the audience, after a few puzzled moments during which they tried to figure out who this unusual looking person was, answered the prayer with a storm of applause. The moment they recognised their Maurice, they loved him in his new makeup. And he has retained it ever since.

One-Man Plea.

Miss MacDonald's plea was addressed only to one person—Ned Wayburn, at that time directing musical shows at the Capitol Theatre in New York. She was in high school in Philadelphia, but on a visit to her sister, Edith, who was dancing with Wayburn in New York, she resolved to go on the stage too. Edith arranged an audition for her with the producer.

She sang for him, praying desperately under her breath, "love me to-night!" Wayburn was impressed. "Can you dance?" he asked her. Jeanette, praying harder, answered that she could.

"Then do a time step for me," he instructed.

Not at all sure that she knew what a time step was, she tried. She guessed right, and her prayer was answered. Wayburn gave her a part in the show and thus started her on her path to fame.

Switched to Stage.

Ruggles, like Chevalier, addressed his plea to an audience. His father, a wholesale druggist, intended the boy to follow in his footsteps, and young Charlie studied chemistry to prepare himself for the future. But a friend who was connected with the theatre painted so glowing a picture of life behind the footlights that he resolved to try for a stage career.

He went to a San Francisco stock company and managed to "sell" himself. His acting was unusual, and while the director wasn't sure that it would go over with an audience, he determined to give him a chance. Ruggles got a minor role.

All of the day before the first performance, Ruggles pleaded silently with the audience which hadn't even arrived at the theatre.

His was the same three-word phrase, "love me to-night."

And it, too, was answered. The audience loved him that night, the following nights, and all the nights that followed. Overnight he was boosted from minor roles to major ones. And he's had them ever since.

Mamoulian Art Keeps Director's Critics Guessing.

The man who has kept the critics thoroughly baffled.

That's the title which even the critics agree might be applied to young Rouben Mamoulian, stage and screen director, whose latest production, "Love Me To-night," starring Maurice Chevalier, comes to the King's Theatre.

In the five brief years during which the critics have been attempting to classify Mamoulian according to the type of production he does best, he has fooled them time after time with his versatility.

Called to New York.

He fooled them the first time five years ago. When the Theatre Guild announced it had secured the young Armenian, totally unknown in New York, to direct its all-negro play of Southern life, "Porgy," they began to suspect the Guild of losing its grip. But when Mamoulian came back from a five-day trip to Charleston, S. C., locale of the story, and staged the play with sensational success, they agreed he was all right. "Porgy" was an unquestionably art as it was a hit.

Mamoulian followed "Porgy" with Eugene O'Neill's satire, "Marco's Millions." The critics, still suffering from the surprise over the first production, thereupon agreed that sensational effects and flashy display constituted his forte, and that this explained his sudden fame. For both plays were spectacular.

Changes Style.

However, they were soon forced to seek other explanations. His next play was "Wings over Europe," in which his task was to manipulate twelve men, who, for the greater part of the play, were seated around a table. He did it so well that a staid first-night audience cheered him. By that time the critics had given up trying to classify him, and when Paramount signed him for motion picture work, they agreed that he was not a "type director."

His versatility continued to manifest itself in Hollywood. "Applause," "City Streets" and "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," his first three films, were of diverse natures, but equally successful.

In "Love Me To-night," he turns his talents to a light, gay comedy.

Chevalier Sings Seven New Hits, In Latest Film.

"Poor Apache," "The Song of Páree," and "How Are You?" are titles of three numbers sung by Maurice Chevalier in "Love Me To-night," a Rouben Mamoulian production, his latest picture, which comes to the King's Theatre.

Chevalier is heard in seven of the ten numbers, written for the production by Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, noted Broadway composing team. Those listed above he sings as solos. Four others he sings with other members of the cast.

Jeanette MacDonald, leading woman in the picture, sings five numbers, one a solo. And she is heard with Chevalier in "Love Me To-night," the theme song.

Practically every member of the large cast . . . Charlie Ruggles, Charles Butterworth, Myrna Loy, C. Aubrey Smith and others . . . sing during the action.

Titles of their numbers are: "Mimi," "Lover," "A Woman Needs Something Like That," "The Man for Me," "The Son of a Gun Is Nothing But a Tailor," and "Isn't It Romantic?"

Rodgers and Hart, writers of many a hit song, are best known for their words and music for the musical comedy, "A Connecticut Yankee," which enjoyed a long Broadway run.

Sparrow Hawk and Canary.

It is a curious and interesting fact that within a week of the publication of my note, on the partiality that the Eastern Sparrow Hawk shows for Canaries, that fresh evidence in support of it should be presented. On Friday I received from a friend a dead Canary and a dead Hawk accompanied by a note which read as follows: "I shot this hawk (Eastern Sparrow Hawk) while it was standing on top of a canary-cage on the back verandah of my quarters at 1.30 p.m. today; it had successfully killed the canary. Just how I do not know; it was so interested in the dead bird that it did not notice me." The hawk was undoubtedly an Eastern Sparrow Hawk, whether male or female has not yet been determined. Apparently this species of hawk is fascinated by yellow birds, — especially yellow in fact, — for we have no local records of it attacking any other birds other than canaries. I have quoted my friend's letter in full in the hope that others who may wish to send me specimens may take it as a model. Hawk, canary, and details of time, place, attitude and behaviour of hawk make a very complete record of scientific value.

A kestrel was observed on the afternoon of November 2. This with Buzzard and Sparrow Hawk is the third of our local winter visiting hawks to arrive in the Colony.

On Thursday a friend reported to me that he had observed a flock of approximately 300 gulls in the neighbourhood of the islands west of Green Island, where the Colony's rubbish is dumped. Three species of Gull visit the district during the winter, they are the Pacific Herring Gull, Larus argentatus, the Black-tailed Gull, Larus cauratus, and the Eastern Common Gull, Larus caninus. Sometimes the Eastern Little Tern, Sterna altilquus, within the body of the gulls in the form of a very much elongated coil, local waters but it probably rarely, if ever, enters the harbour.

Reptiles.

Specimens of all sizes and shapes continue to be collected or sent to me by friends. Recent acquisitions include a small living cobra, a living Three-knotted-string snake, a dead specimen of each species and a dead bamboo snake. When I started writing these notes there were 12 species of snake alive in the lab, but the small Cobra has just killed the Three-knotted-string snake and has swallowed all but the last 4 inches of its tail which protrude from the Cobra's mouth. It will be a very tight fit for the prey is almost as big as the Cobra. A species of snake new to Hong Kong was discovered on the Peak last week. It has been recorded from China and one closely related species has once been found in Hong Kong. This makes a total of 25 species found and caught by my friends, collectors, or myself in Hong Kong and the New Territories. Of the 25 no fewer than 11 species are poisonous.

Cockroaches.

Besides two or three domesticated species of cockroach there are a few wild species. One of these is black, and never to my knowledge grows wings, and lives under stones, flower pots, etc. This species is collected by the Chinese, it is called Shan Kat Chat, locally; the heads of the cockroaches are boiled with pig's trotters and the soup drunk. It is said to be good medicine for human legs. The spread at which a cockroach can scurry across the floor and the stability of a pig upon its feet perhaps have led to the concoction of this strange medicine. A series of experiments is being carried out with specimens for domestic cockroaches and also with new poison varnishes for floors. If the experiments prove satisfactory, and the mixture cheap and easy to make, they will be described subsequently in these notes.

The cobra has taken 4 hours to kill and swallow a snake practically as big as itself. The prey is fitted within the body of the cobra in the form of a very much elongated coil, this gives the cobra a somewhat knobby appearance!

News in Brief.

One case of meningitis occurring in Kowloon, was notified to the Health Authorities on Friday.

An unserviceable revolver was found in a drain by Chan Ping, I.W.D. foreman, at the junction of Spring Garden Lane and Johnston Road, Wanchai. It was brought to the Wanchai Police Station.

HEAVY REWARD DEMANDED

Sequel To European's Happy Valley Loss.

PATRIOTISM PLEA.

A sequel to the incident which occurred at the Race Course, Happy Valley on October 10, when Mr. N. Lang, Chief Engineer of the s.s. Haining had the misfortune to lose his wallet containing a sum of money, and sweep tickets, has brought to light the fact that the wallet has fallen into the hands of one whose demands for its return to its rightful owner are ludicrous.

It is a recognised fact that the finder is entitled to his reward, but the reward in all cases is usually within reason, and finders do not usually stipulate such drastic demands, as the person who states he has found the missing wallet.

In reply to an advertisement which appeared in the local English press on the day after the wallet was lost, Mr. Lang received the following reply, written in Chinese which was translated as follows:—

Mr. N. Lang,

Have you lost a money purse this afternoon? If so, please put a small advertisement on the 12th and 13th in the Chiu Yin Papper, saying that the letter has been noted and I'll let you know immediately my address so that you can come to get it back or perhaps I'll return it to you. But I want to request you to do two things.

1. Your purse had already been lost, but now recovered. As you are one of the Chinese Nationalist, will you subscribe a half of the amount to the Northern Volunteers who are now working for the country.

2. If you got your prize in the Shanghai Autumn Champions, will you subscribe 20 per cent. to the Northern Volunteers and 20 per cent. to Hospitals Charity Association? But you must not misunderstand my idea. Even if you do not wish to do the two things, yet I'll return it to you as it is not mine and I certainly do not want it.

I hope you will let me have a reply after receipt of my letter. If this thing does not belong to you, please find out who is the owner and also ask him to advertise so that it can be returned to him. If no person declares or claims the loss, I'll send half as subscription to the Volunteers and half as Charity Funds.

THE PERSON WHO DOES NOT WANT THINGS NOT BELONGING TO HIM.

October 10, 1932.

N.B.—As I am not residing in Hong Kong, I cannot give you a reply until three or five days after the advertisement. Your purse has been well kept up by me and there shall be no loss but you must not make any mistake in declaring the contents.

On receipt of the above letter Mr. Lang replied giving full particulars, and left the matter in the hands of one of his friends during his absence from the Colony. Repeated requests to return the wallet have been of no avail and the matter rests, together with the wallet, in the hands of "The Person who does not want anything not belonging to him."

OLDE ENGLISH FAIRE GREAT SUCCESS.

Gay Function In St. Andrew's Grounds. PRETTY FOLK DANCES.

The grounds of St. Andrew's Church, Kowloon, were gaily decked for the occasion of the Olde English Faire, which commemorates the opening of St. Andrew's Church for public worship. The Faire yesterday was declared open by Mrs. J. R. Wood, the wife of the Puisne Judge of Hong Kong, in the presence of a large and distinguished gathering, the opening ceremony taking place on the Village Green. Bright sunshine favoured the largely attended function.

Mr. P. S. Cassidy was in the Chair, and was supported by the Rev. W. Walter Rogers, Vicar and Chairman of the Executive Committee, Mr. F. W. Dunn, Secretary, Mr. John W. Baldwin, Treasurer, and other members of the Committee responsible for the excellent arrangements.

After the opening speeches had been delivered, old English folk dances were presented on the Village Green and received prolonged applause. They included the Maypole dance, an early Victorian Gavotte, dance of the Wooden Soldiers, and a country dance, "Newcastle," all of which were executed by girls of the Diocesan Girls' School under the skilled direction of Miss W. Henderson.

All the fun of the traditional "faire" was thoroughly enjoyed by young and old alike. There were many booths at which all kinds of commodities, fruits, flowers, needlework, books, cigarettes, and Christmas presents of all descriptions, were sold.

All In Costume.

A striking feature of the Faire was that all helpers were dressed in old-time costumes, this adding much to the jollity of the occasion. Lavender girls, selling the fragrant herbs, were much in evidence in the grounds, while "Cassandras," gipsy palmist and soothsayer, astonished numerous patrons with her wisdom.

There were numerous side-shows to delight the kiddies. As Town Crier, Mr. L. D. Skinner did yeoman service. The side-shows included the famous Ducking Stool for saucy spouses, Hoop-la, as played by King Henry VIII, Lucky Dip, fishing pool, killing of Guy Fawkes (incidentally, it was Guy Fawkes Day), "cockermut" shies, shooting gallery, shoe ball, skittle alley of ancient fame, and many other diversions.

Travelling Players.

At intervals during the afternoon, the "Strolling Players," Messrs. S. A. Sweet, R. Woolley, J. W. Baldwin, H. Kew, E. H. P. White and R. Baldwin, presented a brief, but laughter-packed scene—Young Pyramus and his love, Thisbe.

At 6 o'clock, the Young People's Service presented the well-known story—play, "Alice in Wonderland," and it was well received.

Home-made ginger beer and brandy snaps were dispensed from the Olde English Cottage and many were the customers.

Refreshments were served on the Village lawn; teas from 3.30 till 6 o'clock and suppers from 7 till 9 p.m.

In the evening the grounds were brilliantly illuminated, the Faire closing with a Fancy Dress Carnival in the Church Hall, from 9 to 11.30.

The proceeds of the Faire are in aid of the newly-installed electric fans in the Church and to most obligations for Church Extension work.

Man Realizes Life As Death Beckons Retrospect Can Teach Lesson To Soul

VALUE OF HUMILITY

(By A Local Padre.)

(This is another of the series of articles written exclusively for the "Sunday Herald" by a local Army chaplain.)

THE Two Minutes Silence of Armistice Day is known to us all. On Friday morning next we shall be commemorating it again for the fourteenth time. The years as they pass in no way seem to dull the poignancy and solemnity of that great tribute we of the after years pay to the memory of those who gave the highest that life could offer in service and sacrifice, and had that gift accepted.

In the sacred silence of those Two Minutes there will recur to us with a pang which the hand of time can never soften, the memory of those whom we loved, whose voices still speak across the empty years, and re-echo within our hearts.

We shall determine again, with renewed force and power that the appalling catastrophe which shattered the peace of the world for four grim years shall not happen again, through any cause which lies within our power to avoid.

How long those minutes seem! How tense! How charged with the magic of meditation, and yet I doubt very much whether anyone could really describe their thoughts during those fleeting minutes.

When the wheels of the world stop going around you are left a little stunned. The maroon which marks the end of the silence brings you back to the realities before you have collected your thoughts.

Have you ever stopped for two minutes to think of yourself, to hold an enquiry into your life and face the charge Guilty or not guilty?

Men who have lain a tangled wreck on the wire in "No Man's Land," men who have thought themselves drowning, people who on their sick beds have surrendered to the thought of death, have told us that the whole panorama of their lives has unfolded before them in a few brief seconds.

Occasionally, perhaps we do take a furtive peep at our inner selves in the mirror of the soul, and not thinking a great deal of the reflection, turn away to forget what we have seen.

Now and again, perhaps in a moment of crisis, we feel sorry or ashamed. Now and again we analyse with contempt our petty vanities and shams and self-deceits, and determine to brace ourselves against the weakness that is within us.

We even determine to be the masters of our self-respect, and to subdue those sinister things that imperil and betray our finest thoughts. But how many of us would have the courage, the moral fortitude, really to face the music. To summon ourselves to the High Court of Conscience, and then in the silence of those two minutes plead to the indictment, Guilty or not guilty? Guilty of those thoughts which in our better moments we know to be wrong. I read the other day that a famous doctor had said that introspection—shall we call it self-analysis?—is a bad thing. It leads he says to an inferiority complex.

Good for the Soul.

In other days before half-vitiated novelists imagined they had more philosophy than the Bible, they called it humility. And humility is a pretty marvellous thing. The man who deems it is cheating himself. For to be humble is not of necessity to be humiliated. More often in the end it is to be elevated.

It is so very easy to dodge one's own accusing finger. Life holds so many distractions to stem the tide of interrogation. You have lived many years; more or less. This world has given you in greater or less degree, its wonders, its beauty, its comforts and its pleasures. Have you in return given your life to the service of a fair measure of service? For service is the rent we pay Almighty God for our freedom on this earth of His.

Putting aside all religions and creeds can you with a straight eye declare that you have not taken more than you have given? You will only pass this way once. Would the world be any worse off if you had never been born, have you left behind you any footprints on the sands of time that will guide one other traveller along the right path? And that body which took God twenty-one years to make, The most marvellous machine ever conceived—what of your custody? Have you stained and crippled it with abuses? Does it run as it ought to, or does it merely "go?"

Look To Your Duty. And that mind and brain: Is it tarnished with the constant reflection of things that are somewhat ugly?

Have you as the friend withheld the helping hand? Or let a pal down who trusted you? As a husband can you point with pride and say "I have put into my home all that I can put. I have taken nothing away that it might miss?"

As a wife, can you say the same? And your children. Do they love and respect you as they should? Can they model themselves on you as a good man, and a loyal and honourable citizen?

Can you honestly say that you have done your level best? Yes, the world would be a great deal better if we were compelled to have another Two Minutes Silence, once every year, and face the Bar of our own impartial Conscience.

Democrats' Charges Called "Falsehood."

He blamed the Great War, its aftermath of War Debts and the liquidation of war inflation, a necessity to maintain a large army and navy to protect the country in a greatly disturbed world. He said if the Democrats wished to find solutions for the guidance of the American people they should not ignore these burdens nor the effect on the world, and America as well, of the enormous jolting out of lives in the World War, the fabulous increase of debts and armaments and the continued friction and hate that had arisen among foreign nations out of harsh treaties.

Roosevelt's Denunciation. Brooklyn, Yesterday. In New York the prediction of a Democrat victory was heard on all sides. Tuesday saw Governor Roosevelt before a huge Democratic rally, attended by Mr. Al Smith and other Tammany leaders.

Mr. Roosevelt denounced the Hoover Administrations as "distinguished by its destruction, delay, deceit and despair."

Mr. Roosevelt offered no Utopia, no gospel of fear of panic, but a practical, common sense, Democrat platform. Chicago, Yesterday. The Republican campaign headquarters announced that former President Calvin Coolidge will join Mr. Hoover in a final appeal to the electorate by radio on the eve of election. — Reuters' American Service.

THE MODERN USES OF MILK.

Importance Of Machinery.

COLOSSAL DEMAND.

The organization required to-day for the efficient distribution of milk in the densely populated cities of Great Britain has reached such a pitch of perfection that the average person is perhaps unaware of the complexity of the problems involved.

As in so many other phases of modern life, machinery, in numerous different forms, plays a highly important part. Indeed, on dairy farms where the mechanical milk is employed, it can truthfully be said that the milk is dealt with from start to finish practically entirely by the aid of machinery. From the milker to the vacuum churn, the milk passes through rubber pipes, is strained in a tank, pumped over a brine cooler and is then fed into large motor tankers. When the tanker arrives at the city, the milk is pumped into glass lined supply tanks, and from there it passes through pre-heaters before it is filtered and pasteurized.

Again, machinery is used for bottle filling. The bottles are transported on roller conveyors to the mechanical fillers, where they can be filled and "diced" at the rate of 25,000 an hour, for the complete movement takes less than one second for each bottle and a number are, of course, dealt with simultaneously.

Nowadays, the continuous demand for milk is on a colossal scale; London's average daily consumption, for example, is estimated at approximately 500,000 gallons. The annual production for the whole of Great Britain is in the neighbourhood of one thousand million gallons, a figure which includes the industrial demand. A certain proportion is, of course, used by manufacturers of a wide variety of products; the Ovaltine factory in Hertfordshire, for instance, uses some thousands of gallons daily, and although a model dairy farm has been established on this estate, it is more in the nature of an experimental farm than as a producer of the supply required each day. In actual fact, it occupies a position of extreme importance in the organization at King's Langley.

Industry Still Young.
The pedigree prize-winning Jerseys, which comprise this select herd, provide the laboratory with all the milk data required by the staff of research chemists, whose duty it is to ensure that only the best materials procurable are used in the process of manufacture. To this end, therefore, tests are continuously carried out and the data thus secured is of the highest value in ensuring that the milk employed comes only from the best sources of supply.

An interesting development in the uses of milk for industrial purposes, which has made vast strides in the last few years, is the production of what is known as casein plastic manufactures. Based essentially on dried milk, these include such articles of every day use as buttons, combs, floor handles, pencil cases, electric fittings etc. It is generally recognized, however, that this industry is still in its infancy and the next few years are likely to see further important developments, along these lines.

SOVIET INDUSTRY FAILURE.

Low Output Of Bad Quality.

Soviet industry—the foundation of the whole of the Five-Year Plan—is the most backward section of all, according to the Industrialization (the official organ of the Soviet Big Business).

Enormous capital outlay has increased the gross industrial output by 60 per cent. since 1930, but the effective output is really much lower owing to what Ivestia calls its "unpardonably bad quality."

The output per man has increased only 7 1/2 per cent. since 1930. This does not repay the terrible sacrifices involved in equipping new plants with the latest and most efficient foreign machinery.

Labour Incompetence.

Labour incompetence, caused by bad living conditions and the under-payment of the skilled workers, is one of the main causes of the failure to fulfil the plan, either quantitatively or qualitatively.

Ivestia gives as reasons for this setback—

Bolshevik managers do not know how to lead the workers;

They have been let down by the mines and furnaces producing raw materials, the railways transporting them, the Government departments financing industry, and the failure of the co-operative organizations to supply adequate food and clothing for the workers;

"Red-tape" of Government offices has hampered all initiative; and While new factories are being built, old ones have been allowed to decay.

MOTOR CYCLE TRIALS.*British Victory In Italy.

Only the British and Italian teams succeeded in retaining maximum marks in the road section of the International Six Days Motor Cycle Trial and, as a result, the speed test had to decide the eventual determination of the Trophy. It is the source of great excitement on every side that the full amount of import duty won after a truly amazing struggle.

Considering the extremely difficult nature of the course, the high reputation of successful competitors, 29 starters out of 128 starters, is a remarkable tribute to the efficiency of modern machines. The road and hill sections and the ascent of every well-known pass in the mountains would tax any mechanically minded cyclist to the utmost to maintain what is cost.

It is difficult for those who have never seen them to appreciate what it means to average 30 m.p.h. up the long Italian mountain passes. No roads in this country can compare with them for severity, twists, and incessant dust. Only the finest machines can survive the tortuous stresses to which they are subjected in such a long distance affair.

Britain won the coveted trophy again after two years in sheer reliability, coupled with speed, for it was the latter quality that they publicly demonstrated in beating the Italian team, who nevertheless put up a wonderful performance.

ENGINES CHANGED TO BEAT DUTIES.*French Agitation For Rigid Law.

It is not surprising that the French Customs officials are agitating for improved methods of marking engine numbers on many British cars temporarily imported into France. To justify the admission of cars without exacting in cash the full amount of import duty the Customs Authorities must be able to assure themselves that a car exported after, say, a short holiday tour is in all material respects the same machine that was imported a few weeks earlier. It is certainly not contemplated that the vehicle should come in with one engine and go out with a different one, yet that is precisely what has occurred on more than one occasion at a French port.

Too often engine numbers are stamped on detachable plates, which are really valueless for identification purposes. Sometimes the numbers are very roughly impressed on some very awkwardly placed part of the engine itself, the figures being badly formed and frequently painted over. When an engine number is secreted in this way valuable time is wasted in Customs examinations and tempers are apt to suffer. The truth is that all engine numbers should be clearly stamped on the cylinder block, on a flat surface, and in full view when the bonnet side is raised. ("The Autocar").

The Origin Of The Motor Cycle

Interesting Talk On Cycle Development

CHINA'S "TOURIST TROPHY"

Mr. Kynt Tong, Vice-president of the China Associated Motorcyclists, which is promoting the China International Tourist Trophy Trial in October this year from Shanghai to Nanking via Hangchow over the new Shanghai-Nanking Highway, gave a very interesting brief radio address recently at the Amateur Home Station, Kiangse Road.

In brief, Mr. Tong said: "Motor cycling offers much enjoyment as a pastime, and much convenience as a commercial transport, chiefly on account of the reliability of the modern motor cycle and its low cost of maintenance. The present motor cycle has reached such a height of perfection in design and construction that it may be thoroughly relied upon to give satisfactory service under all conditions.

Zenith Of Perfection.

"In order to appreciate the zenith of perfection which the motor cycle has attained, it is interesting to look back to the olden times and to trace the sources which were responsible for the successes of the present day.

"A motor cycle, as its name implies, is a self moving bicycle, therefore, a greater portion of this machine belongs to the bicycle, and the rest to the engine. On account of the rapid improvements of the bicycle from its early designs, we are able to adapt it for a motor attachment. Although from an outward appearance the modern cycle frame may not look the same as that of a bicycle, nevertheless the principle of design and the theory of steering are identical. "First of all," Mr. Tong continued, "we will deal with the development of the bicycle by outlining a short history from the hobby-horse to the present day safety.

"The first true bicycle was invented by a Frenchman named Népice in 1816; it was called the Celeripede, or Hobby Horse, and had two equal-sized wooden wheels, with iron tyres connected by a wooden bar. The front wheel could be steered by means of a handlebar connected to the top of the forks in which the wheel revolved. The rider sat on a padded seat on the connecting bar, and propelled himself and the machine along by striking his feet alternately on the ground; in fact it may be said that he ran along sitting down.

"Dandy Horse. "In 1818 an improved dandy horse was invented by Baron Von Drais of Mannheim, and it was called after him the Draisienne; it is said that the baron could get ten miles an hour out of his machine.

"It is difficult to ascertain the exact date when pedals were first fitted to the two-wheeler, and the credit is probably due to one Kirkpatrick Macmillan, who affixed cranks to the back wheel of a hobby horse and connected these to long swinging levers, jointed again to horizontal rods hinged to the cross bar connecting the two wheels. The date must have been about 1840. Macmillan died in 1878.

"Gaven Dalziel made a similar machine in 1846, closely resembling Macmillan's.

"Pedals And Cranks. "In 1866, Lallement fitted pedals and cranks to the front wheel of a bicycle so as to drive same direct, the front wheel also steering; a man named Turner brought a similar machine to London from Paris in 1869, and this was copied by the Coventry Machinists Co. (then makers of sewing machines) and put on the market here, from this time the front wheel increased in size, the back wheel getting proportionately smaller. Then came rubber tyres, and the wire suspension wheel replaced its wooden-spoked predecessor."

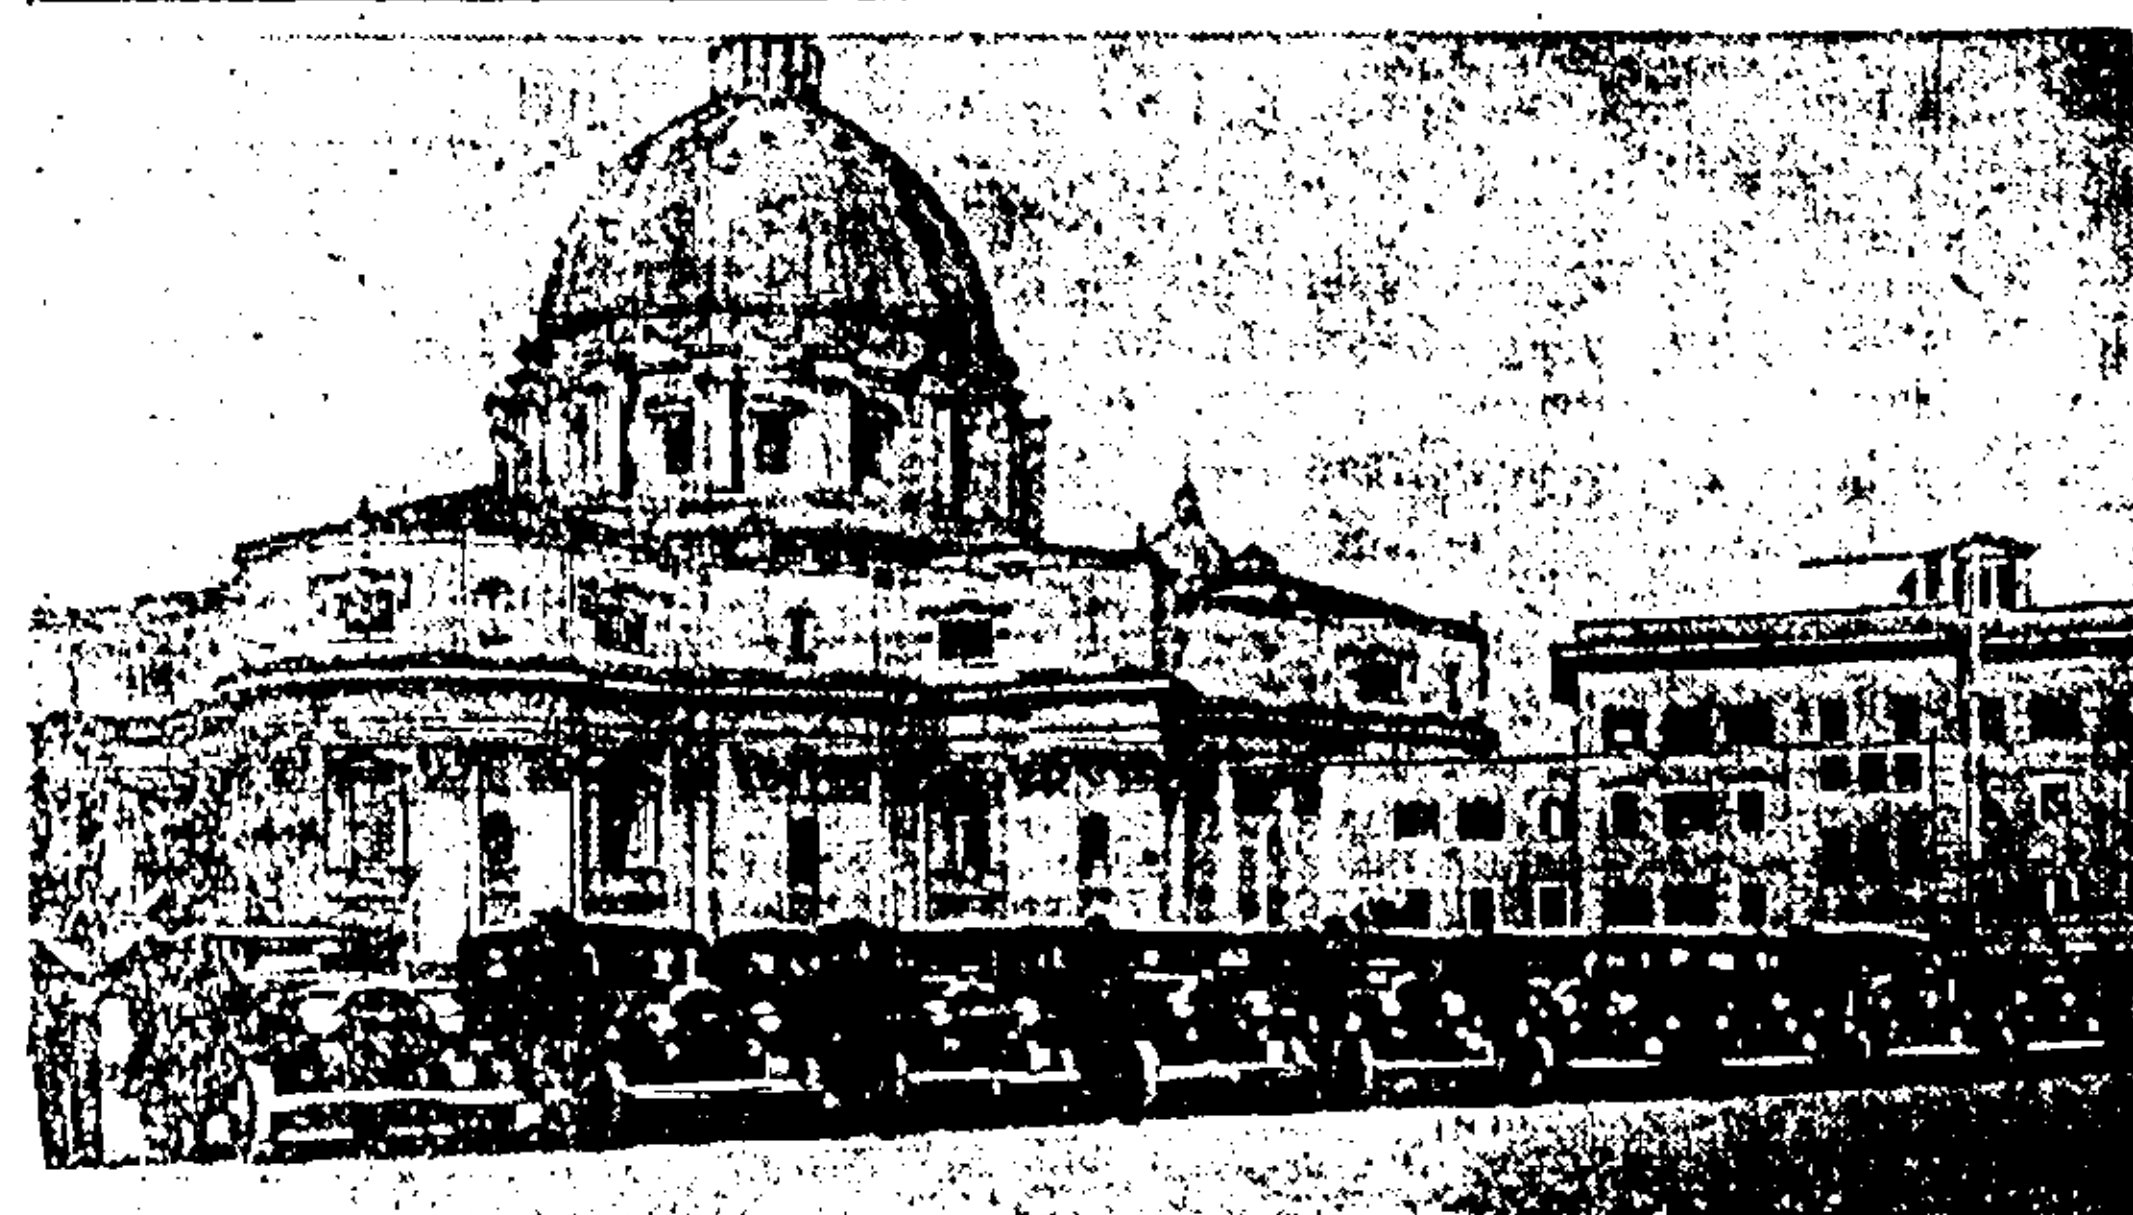

This is the first of a series of educational stories on "Bicycles and Motorcycles" to be given every Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the same station by Mr. Tong, who is at the same time the head of Airland Limited.

When interviewed by the Press about the definite date for the China International Tourist Trophy Trial, Mr. Tong said that probably the date would be postponed to about a week or ten days later than October 7, 1932. There are already about 40 entries, so a successful trial run is quite assured.

The six days' motor-cycle road race in the Upper Adige (South Tyrol) ended with a double victory for the British team. Walker, McGregor and Williams, all on Rudgers, gained the Silver Vase contest. Italy was second in both events.

A HUGE PUMP.

Road goods transport stations are becoming as elaborate and luxurious as coach stations, according to details published in "Motor Transport." One of the latest—owned by a London firm—is nearing completion, and is being equipped with sleeping quarters, a canteen, a kitchen with electrical cooking apparatus, a telephone box, and hot and cold water. The area available for lorries is 1,400 square yards, a 5,000-gallon petrol pump has already been installed.

MOTOR TOURISTS IN CANADA.

It is estimated that American motorists spent a sum of no less than £37,600,000 in Canada during 1931. Despite this large total, it is 7 per cent. less than in the preceding year and 12.7 per cent. less than in the peak year of 1929. The total number of American cars taken into Canada during last year for tourist purposes was 4,909, 989, or 9.2 per cent. less than in 1930.—"The Autocar."

Not Even An "Arsene Lupin" Could Escape From CHARLIE CHAN, The Chinese Detective.

LATEST FILM STORY OF FAMOUS CHINESE
DETECTIVE
"CHARLIE CHAN'S CHANCE."

An intensely gripping mystery melodrama, "Charlie Chan's Chance" Based on an Earl Derr Biggers novel, John G. Blystone directed this Fox Films picture. Warner Oland, supreme in Oriental characterisations, appears as Charlie Chan, the famed Chinese detective from Honolulu. The lovers are Marian Nixon and Alexander Kirkland, last seen as the youngest son in "Surrender." Others in the cast are H. B. Warner, Linda Watkins, James Kirkwood and Ralph Morgan.

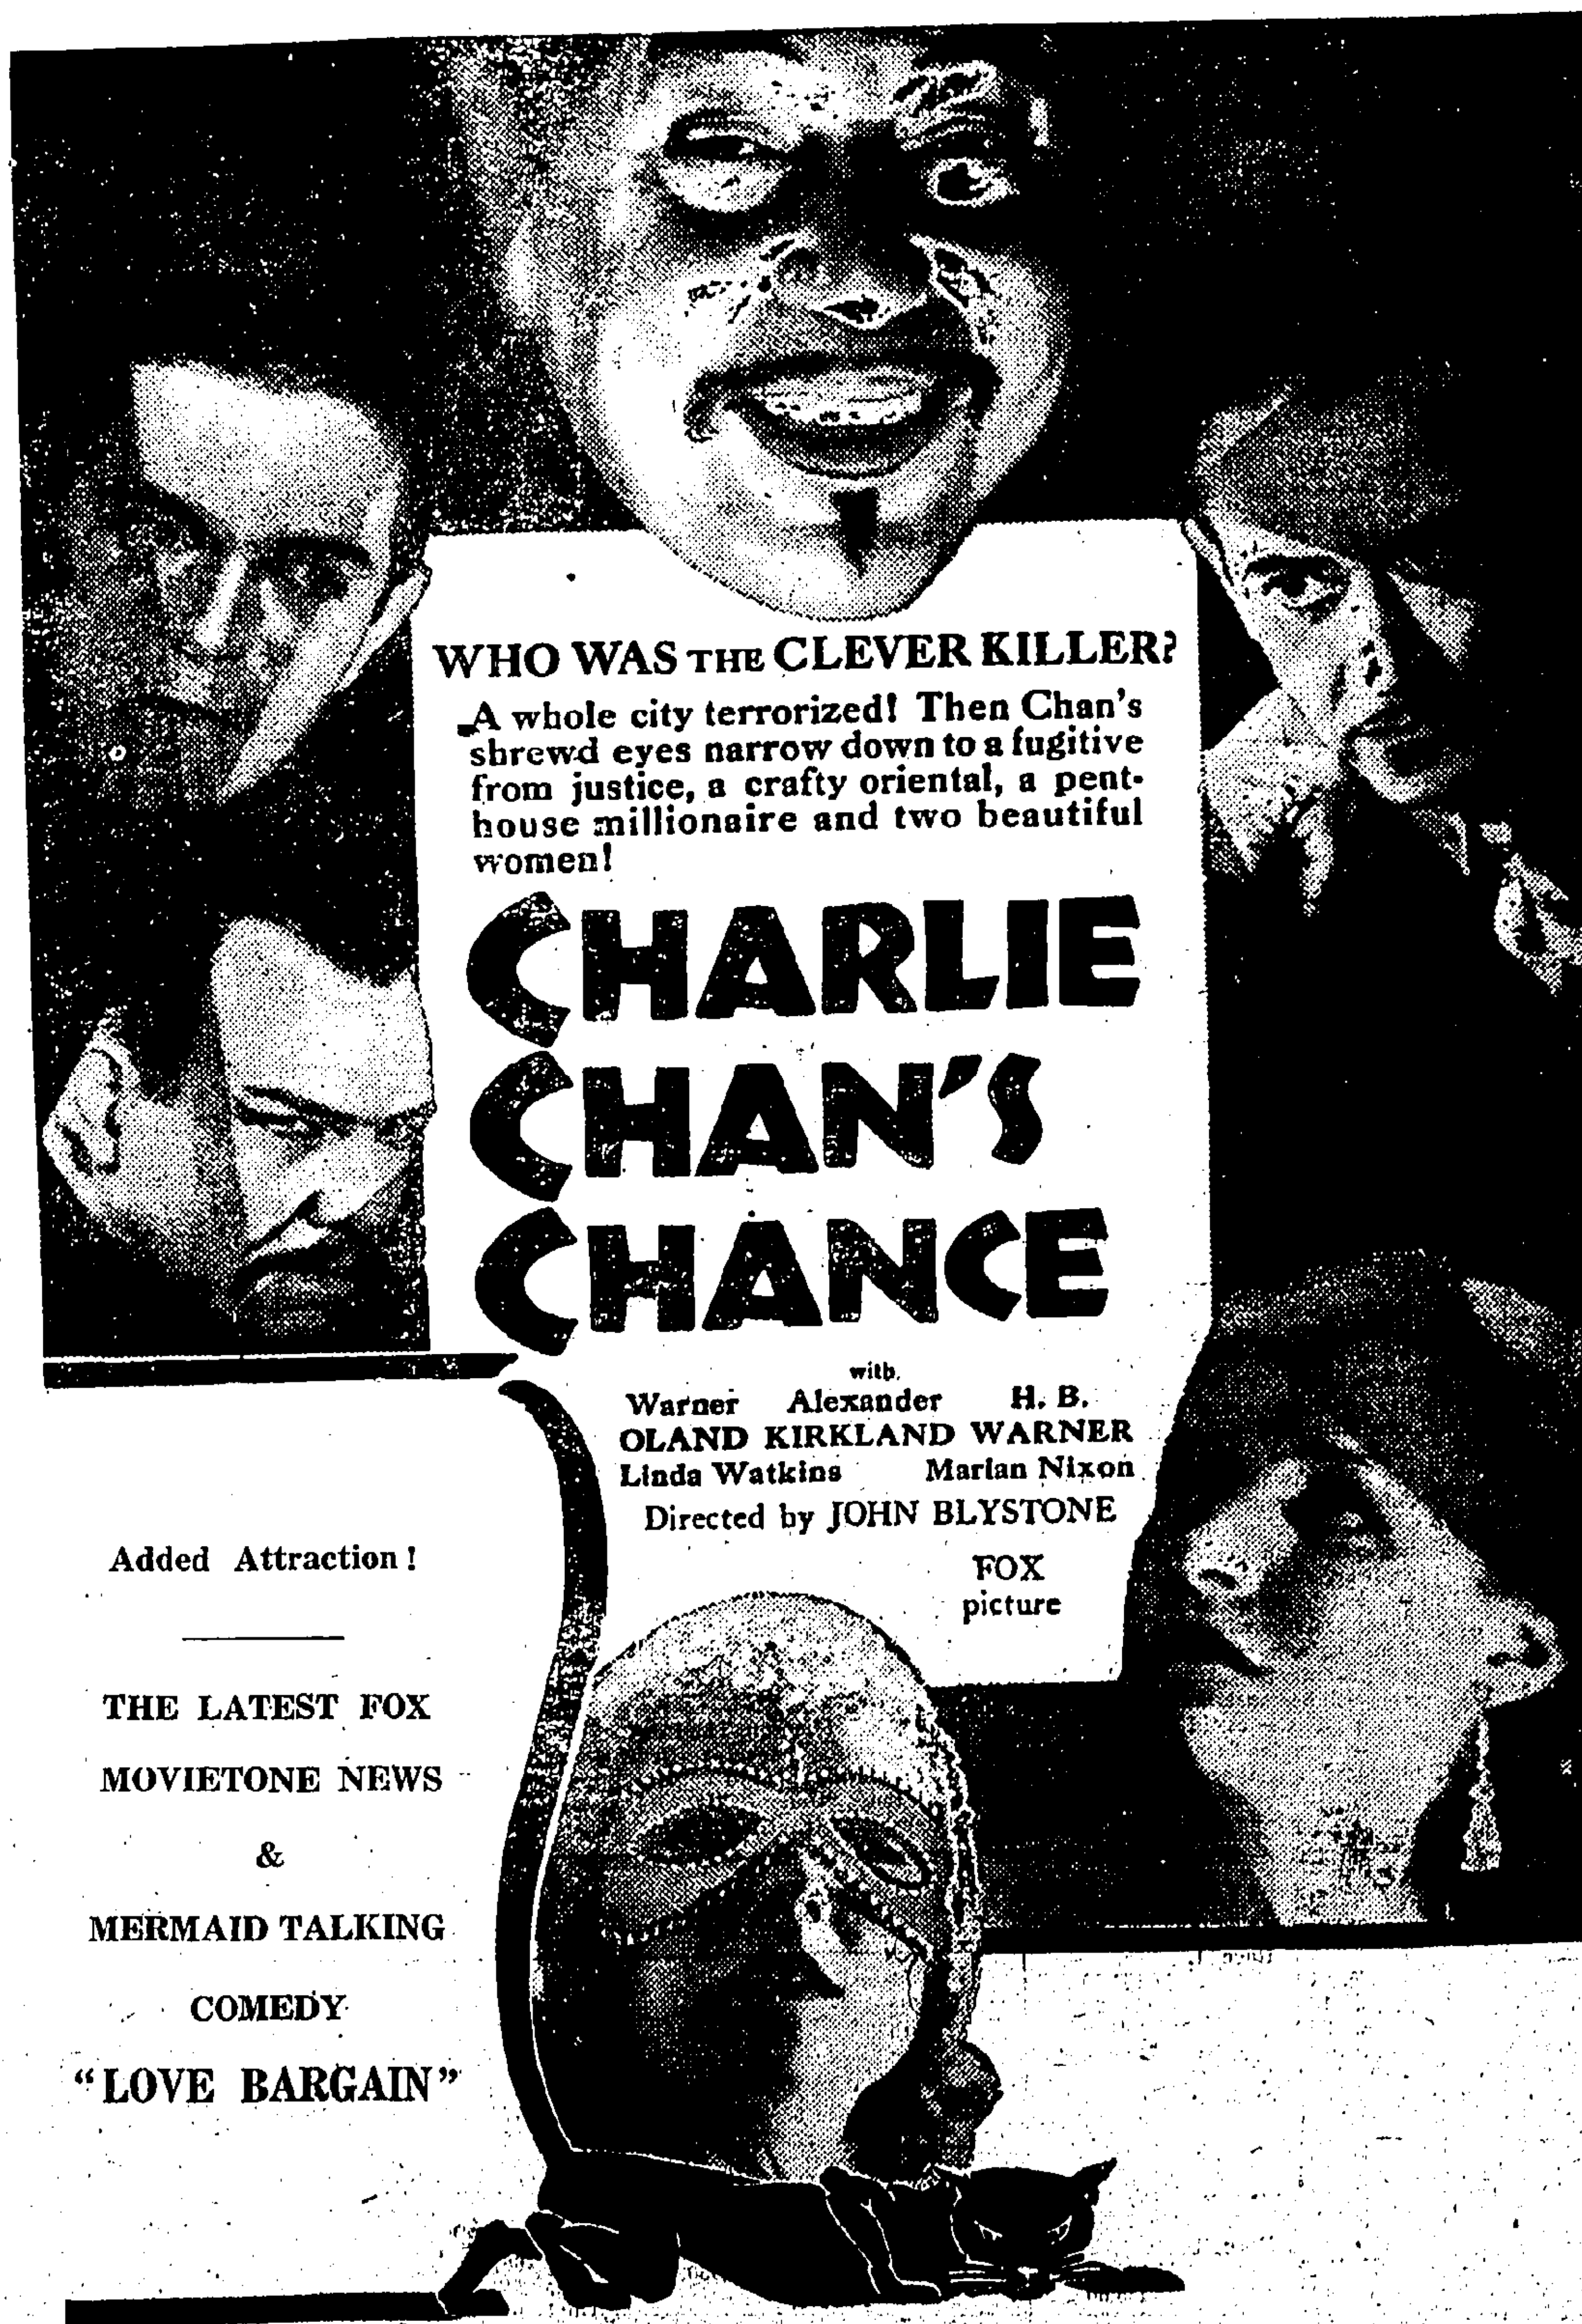

The story details the newest adventures of Charlie Chan, this time in a New York setting, where he finds himself studying the police methods of that city.

A mysterious murder is committed and Scotland Yard detectives combine efforts with the metropolitan police, but they are unable to solve the baffling crime. Charlie Chan, by virtue of his superior wisdom and his keen analytical mind, discovers important clues, reconstructs the crime and, after a series of thrilling experiences and many narrow escapes, untangles the enigmatical skein. The murderer is finally revealed in a dramatic climax.

The role of Charlie Chan gives Oland full play for his unusual talents developed during a long period of experience on the stage and screen. He has been playing Oriental roles for many years, appearing in such outstanding productions as "Dr. Fu Manchu," "The Return Of Dr. Fu Manchu," "The Black Camel" and "Charlie Chan Carries On."

Blystone, who directed the picture, holds the record of having transferred fifty-four stories to the screen for films with an unbroken series of successes. "Mother Knows Best" was his first talking picture and he followed this production with such hits as "Through Different Eyes," "The Sky Hawk," "So This Is London," one of Will Rogers' best pictures, "Mr. Lemon Of Orange" and "Young Sinners."

Barry Connors and Philip Klein, who prepared the story for the screen, did a similar job for "The Black Camel," "Charlie Chan Carries On," "Riders Of The Purple Sage" and "The Rainbow Trail."

WHO WAS THE CLEVER KILLER?
A whole city terrorized! Then Chan's shrewd eyes narrow down to a fugitive from justice, a crafty oriental, a pent-house millionaire and two beautiful women!

IMPORTANT FEATURE OF
POLICE WORK GRAPHICALLY
SHOWN IN FILM DEPICTING LATEST ADVENTURES OF CHARLIE CHAN, HAWAIIAN
DETECTIVE.

An interesting sidelight on one angle of police methods is afforded in the "line up" scenes of "Charlie Chan's Chance," the new Fox picture, with Warner Oland in the title role.

The "line up" is a parade of criminals and suspects across a brilliantly lighted stage at police headquarters. The lighting is so arranged that the hundred or more detectives can plainly see the prisoners, but the prisoners cannot see the officers who scrutinise them as the men and women criminals are, one at a time, halted in the centre of the stage for questioning and for inspection.

Joseph Reilly, former headquarters detective in New York, who is now Director of Safety at the two Fox studios in Hollywood and Beverly Hills, and who gave technical advice and played a small role during the production of "Charlie Chan's Chance," is authority for the assertion that the "line up" was first established by Scotland Yard in London.

"The 'line up' is a review of all newly arrested criminals before the detectives at police headquarters every morning for the purpose of giving the officers a line on their walk, their physical defects, scars or anything else that might aid in identifying them in future cases," explained Chief Reilly.

"Many times these prisoners arrested on suspicion of having committed a crime, following their being finger printed, are discovered to be wanted for a crime committed in some other city or another country. In that event the police or government of that city are immediately notified that the man or woman is in custody. This procedure is followed by the police departments of all cities of any size. Frequently, in New York, as many as 400 prisoners are paraded before the eyes of the detectives during a single morning session.

"It may be interesting to know that cities like New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Los Angeles and San Francisco have detectives going back and forth to all parts of the world for criminals wanted.

"A request from any city or country for finger prints and photographs of criminals is immediately complied with and in this manner and police departments of the world are in continual touch with one another. The file cabinets of every big city in the United States contain these photographs and finger prints and they are in continual use."

In "Charlie Chan's Chance," Charlie Chan, the famed Chinese detective of Honolulu, goes to New York to study the crime-detecting methods of that city and while thus engaged solves a mysterious murder that has puzzled the metropolitan police and the operatives of Scotland Yard.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT—

A four-point, all-rubber mounting, extending to the rear of the transmission, supports the entire Chevrolet power plant.

A mounting of this type is very unusual in a low priced car. The Chevrolet construction consists of a diamond-shaped design with a point of support at the front, one at each rear corner of the crankcase and one at the rear of the transmission. All four points are supported on rubber, giving adequate cushioning and damping engine vibration before it reaches the body. It prevents vibration and supports the engine firmly.

LOCOMOTIVES ORDERED FROM BRITISH FIRM

Canton Requires New Railway Stock.
WILL SPEND $1,900,000

Canton, Yesterday.
The Ministry of Railways has set aside $1,900,000 for the purchase of new locomotives and coaches for the Canton-Shaokwan Railway and the Canton-Samshui Railway. Orders for these vehicles will be placed with engineering firms in England.

The section of the Canton-Shaokwan Railway between Wooking and Mapa is in bad condition, as the ties (sleepers) are worn out, and the administration has borrowed 3,000 catties of ties for replacement from the Shaokwan-Chuchow Railway Administration.

Four motor coaches will be placed in service on the Canton-Samshui Railway, running between Canton and Fatsan on the West River. These coaches will also be ordered from England, each vehicle holding 100 passengers. A special platform will be constructed at the Fatsan station to avoid the rush.

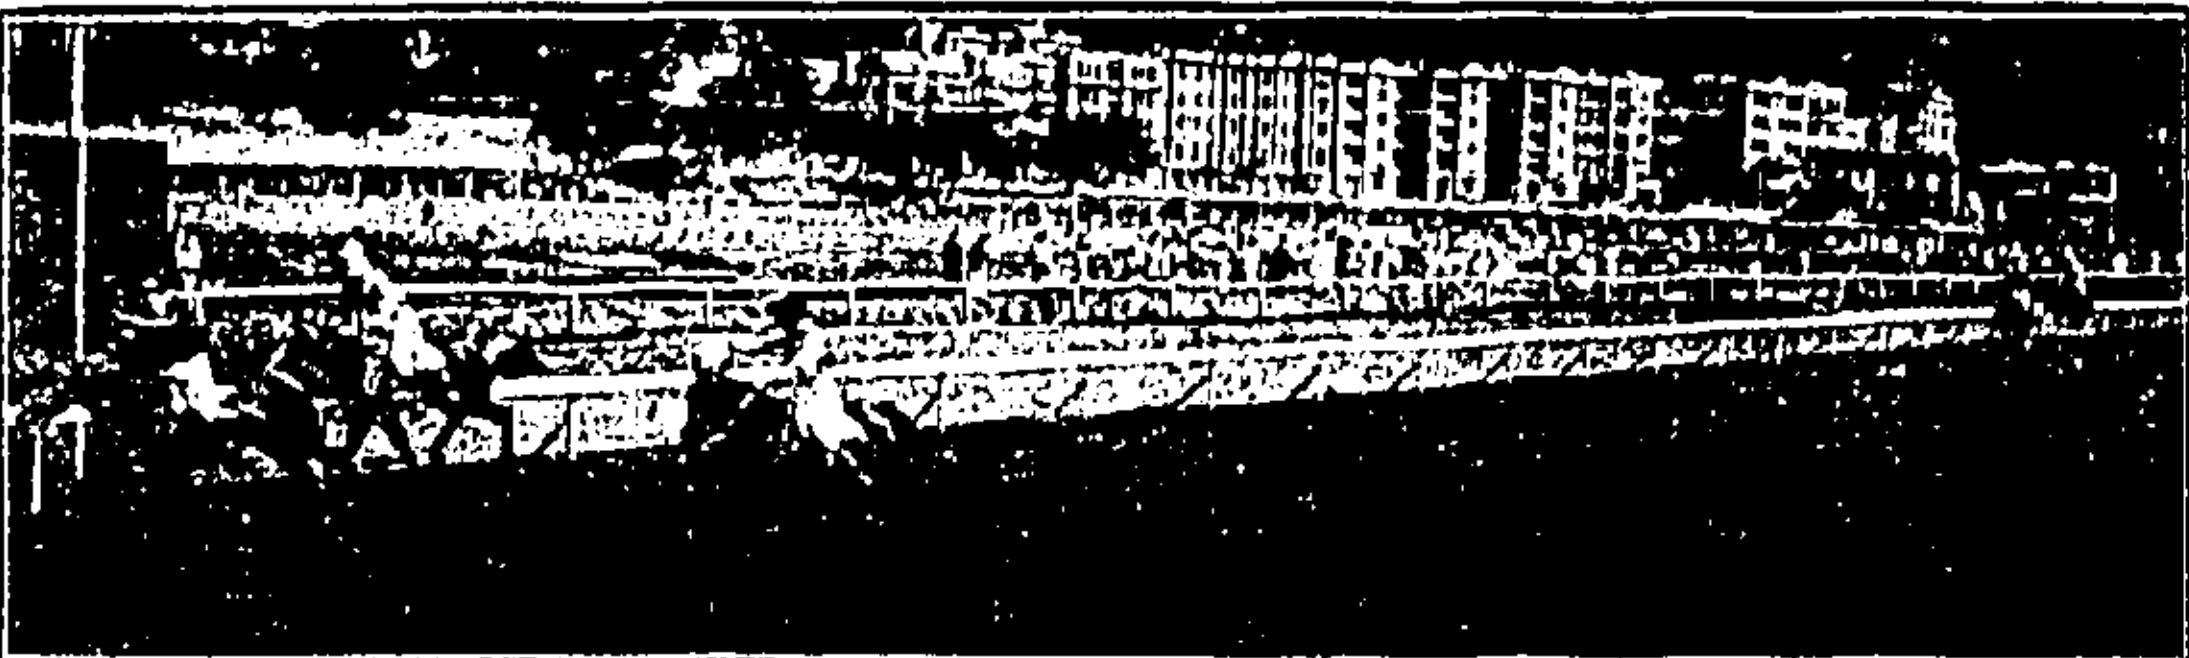

Passenger traffic on this line has increased ten times between September this year and the same month a year ago.—Central Press.
